CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS Traders Mostly Mark Time Awaiting Move-

Temporarily, corn seemed to have been sold to a standstill, so far at least as futures deliveries were concerned. Commission houses and floor traders were said to have been scalously backing efforts to prevent undue inflation of prices and had reached a stage where the market needed a balance such as would be afforded by increased stocks. At first today, cold weather that seemed likely to stop damage to corn, tended to ease the market and so aid Wall street weakness, but the effect was counterbal-anced later by talk of increased feeding demand and by advices that the movement of the new crop had been much hindered by Onts developed a little firmness, owing to lightness of rural offerings. Provisions went a sag after an early advance. The initial strength was associated with an upturn in quotations on hogs.
