

CREIGHTON CADETS STARTLE FARM WIFE

Student Soldiers Stage Army Maneuvers Near Bellevue to Apprehension of Sary County Residents.

"What's that, the German army?" asked Mrs. Cyrus Haywood of her husband Thursday afternoon. They were standing on the back porch of their farmhouse two miles northeast of Bellevue, gazing at a long line of troops working their way stealthily across a cornfield a quarter of a mile away. It looked like a regular army, too, small though it was. There were reconnoitering parties in advance, the main body was well flanked to prevent a surprise attack, and strong rear guard was following slowly along behind.

"Oh, look! Cy! There's another army, and they are coming towards each other. Oh, there is going to be a fight!"

It certainly looked as if something like that was going to happen. Not a sound broke the all-pervading stillness. But there it was actually happening before her eyes. The bodies of men were inexorably, grimly intent on coming face to face, for the purpose, to all outward indications, of working dire destruction on each other.

Creighton Cadets.

Cy, meanwhile, was smiling broadly. "Why, those are the Creighton cadets out for a lark, and incidentally to get an idea of how our Uncle Sam does things in war," he volunteered.

He was interrupted by the sound of cheering borne to his ears by the wind, and he beheld the two lines making a mad, wild charge, which terminated in the interlocking of figures, amid much cheering and laughing.

Peace was declared. The battle was declared a draw, since neither army had been able to surprise or surround the other, and there were mutual congratulations between Majors McGan and Morarity, who were in command of the two sections of the Creighton university cadet regiment.

This was the first hike by the Creighton student military organization. The quartermaster sergeants saw to the transportation of supplies, and at noon a temporary truce was declared and operations ceased. Each squad had its own campfire, and made coffee, roasted weiners, and toasted marshmallows.

Reducing Electric Signs Not Best Way to Save Coal

I. B. Zimman, head of the sales department of the Nebraska Power company, believes he has a better way to conserve coal than to reduce the number of illuminated signs.

"I am with the government in its efforts to conserve and make the best use of coal, but I do not believe that electric signs and illuminations are the best places to start," said Mr. Zimman. "The amount of coal used in a large central power plant to maintain these signs is comparatively small. It requires a certain amount of coal and a certain output of current to bring a large plant up to its high point of efficiency and service. I would suggest that women refuse to wear the type of heels known as French wooden heels. It requires power to fashion millions of pairs of these heels and several operations of machinery are necessary to make these heels. By stopping the manufacture of millions of pairs of heels much coal would be saved; in fact, more than you would believe. These heels are not necessary. I do not believe they are conducive to physical well-being. Electric street signs add to safety of traffic and are almost a necessity. I would say they are necessary, although some might not agree with me on that point. But I am ready to show many places and many ways for saving coal without disturbing illuminated signs."

Man Pinched For Lauding Kaiser Takes Other Tack

Gus Stein showed no evidence of pro-German sympathies when he was brought to the office of the United States attorney Friday morning. He is a trucker at the Union Pacific freight house and was arrested Thursday for alleged remarks laudatory of the kaiser.

While waiting in the United States attorney's office Stein heard several men talking about the kaiser's withered right arm.

"Excuse me," volunteered Stein, "but do you think I would stand up for a man like the kaiser? Why should I stand up for such a man? He has laid waste the home of my father and mother and youngest and oldest brothers in Poland. He deserves to have a withered arm. He got that because of intermarrying. They are afraid they will lose their hold on the power unless they keep on marrying their cousins. Do I look like a man who would say anything in favor of the kaiser?"

Stein talks English very brokenly. The United States attorney has taken no action on the case.

McCrosen Draws Thirty Days On Wife's Testimony

Lee McCrosen, 616 North Seventeenth street, drew thirty days in the county jail this morning when arraigned in police court on a charge of disturbing the peace. Mrs. Babe McCrosen, wife of the defendant, complained against him.

Mrs. McCrosen also alleged her husband departed from the family domicile with a victrola and a violin. These two articles the husband admitted selling. Mrs. McCrosen said she was afraid of her husband and she is now obtaining a divorce from him. She alleges he drinks alcohol and terrifies her.

Tears Fill Eyes of the Women As They Read Message to Soldiers

A motherly little woman, plainly attired, knocked at the door of the soldiers' Christmas packet committee in the First National bank building and when Mrs. E. T. Swobe invited her in, presented a packet she had prepared.

"It is the most perfect one we received, candy, tobacco, gum, dates, figs, a black tie, a small testament, trench mirror and many other useful articles," said Mrs. Swobe. "This is the note we found enclosed: 'Dear Lad: We mothers are doing our best to keep the home fires burning. With loving thought of you and prayers for you, with deeds done every day for you and yours, we send on our love this Christmas day. God bless you, son. Just a Mother.'"

Tears stood in the eyes of the women who read this loving note.

Ireneus Shuler didn't need any one to ask him to contribute to the soldiers' Christmas fund. When he learned Harry Tukey had raised $190 among real estate men, he telephoned Mr. Tukey's office and told him to make it $200.

A genuine Irish blackthorn stick will be sold at the Fontenelle cigar stand for the benefit of the soldiers' fund. The stick is donated by a well known Omaha woman.

Thousands of packages of gum were contributed by school children.

Kiddies Bring Gum to School For Sammies

Thursday was "gum day" at the Miller Park school. Yes, actually! The kiddies were not only allowed but asked and encouraged to bring in all the gum they could! Every chubby hand bore a package of the tin-foil wrapped delicacy, which was taken straight to the principal's office.

For joy in their history there was no reprimand for bringing in gum, but it was received with a smile.

For this gum is to be sent to the soldier boys in the Red Cross Christmas packages.

With other good things it will be wrapped in khaki handkerchiefs and sent over the ocean to bring a touch of home to the boys at the front.

Great heaps of the gum packages stood in the office this morning waiting to be taken by the Campfire girls to the Red Cross headquarters.

Road Repair Patrol to Be Established by the County

A regular patrol is to be established by the county commissioners to go over the newly paved roads in the county regularly and see that they are kept in repair. The Commercial clubmen and the Omaha Automobile club asked for this innovation and after repeated efforts got the commissioners to agree to it.

The members of the good roads committee of the Commercial club and the Omaha Automobile association are making regular inspection trips on West Dodge street, where five miles of old macadam on the Lincoln highway is being resurfaced. Several inches of crushed stone is being put in, and this is to be topped off with "tarvia" asphalt. This stretch of paving is to be in the nature of a model for future road improvement work of this class.

Dr. Jordan will speak at the Zion Baptist church Sunday morning and at the Seward Street Methodist Episcopal church Sunday evening. The missionary declares there are over 100 American missionaries on the west coast of Africa who must remain there during the war.

Dr. Jordan is secretary of the Foreign Mission Board of the National Baptist convention and comes from Philadelphia.

New Barges to Be Built For Decatur River Line

From three to five new barges for Missouri river transportation may be built this winter by the Omaha-Decatur Missouri River Navigation company. Officers and directors plan to acquire enough barges so that some may be unloading at the docks at either terminal while others are carrying the loads up and down the river, as it would afford something for the power boats to do all the time. Hitherto the power boats have been forced to stand idle at the landings for a day or two while cargoes were being unloaded and new ones taken on.

Retail Coal Men to Meet; Cost Expert on Way Here

Retail coal dealers will meet this evening on the top floor of the City National bank building to hear a report of a committee of the dealers which has conferred with State Fuel Administrator John L. Kennedy on the local fuel situation.

Mr. Kennedy received word from Washington this morning that the fuel cost expert he requested would come to Omaha within the week to confer with local dealers over prices to be charged.

Church Celebration at Fremont Sunday

Fremont, Neb., Nov. 2.—(Special.)—The quadricentennial of the Reformation will be held here on November 4. In the morning, Rev. J. Kilgendorf of Omaha, vice president of Missouri synod, will deliver the sermon. Rev. H. H. Hartman of Fort Dodge, Ia., and Rev. Leo Hartman of Louisville, Neb., also will speak.

The celebration will take place in the Larson opera house, several quartets rendering selections.

Equitable Life Invests Premiums in Liberty Bonds

That the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York will invest all first year premiums in Liberty bonds was the text of a telegram received by Guy A. Collard, manager of the Omaha agency, from President W. A. Day. "This company had previously subscribed to $15,000,000 of the bonds."

Indian Summer Prevails Throughout Middlewest

According to the morning reports to the railroad, perfect fall weather is the rule all the way from the Missouri river through to the Rocky mountains. It is clear and calm, with temperatures ranging from 24 to 40 degrees above zero.

URGE AUTOISTS TO TREAT SOLDIERS

Recreation Committee of Rotary Club Adopts Slogan of "No Empty Seat in Your Automobile."

"No empty seat in your auto," this is a slogan adopted by the recreation committee of the Omaha Rotary club, which committee is seeking to provide entertainment for the soldier boys.

The idea in the "No-empty-seat-in-your-auto" slogan is to make people share their automobiles with the soldiers who are stationed at the forts around Omaha.

"People drive up and downtown in their big automobiles Saturday, Sunday, Monday and every other day," said C. H. English, chairman of the committee, while the soldier boys are thick on the sidewalks walking. These boys are strangers here in the city and they would appreciate a ride. They would appreciate being shown the city. It is no necessary to have an introduction to the boys. Simply call to them on the sidewalk. 'Hey, fellows, would you like to ride?' and the chances are ten to one the boys will be very glad to take a little ride. It is not necessary that you bring them back every time to the place where they started from. Drop them off at the end of your journey. They will hop on a car and come back, or they will get into the next automobile going back, but give them a ride; they will appreciate it. We can do little enough for these boys before they go into the trenches."

The recreation committee is planning other activities to give the boys recreation and entertainment while here, but is not yet ready to announce the plans.
