Two Parachute Flights Made by Fort Omaha Men

A remarkable parachute jump was made at Fort Omaha yesterday by Lieutenant Maurice Smith. From a height of 1,400 feet he stepped out into the blue as easily as if he had been making parachute leaps for years, though this was his first. The descent was perfect, the parachute opened slowly and Smith, who is a heavy man, floated slowly to the ground in 1 minute and 42 seconds.

Smith is a Yale man and an ex-foot ball star. He has been one of the best students at Fort Omaha, where he has been training for five months. As soon as the war broke out, he organized a balloon squad at Yale, where he was then a senior, and obtained the aid of wealthy alumni in buying a balloon. As soon as the Fort Omaha balloon school was started, he was advised to come here and did so, bringing a number of his classmates along. All these have won commissions here.

Captain Frank Goodale, who made the first parachute jump of the Fort Omaha balloon school while ex-President Taft was here, made a second jump yesterday at Fort Omaha, following the jump of Lieutenant Smith. This was made to try out some new harness connected with the parachute invented by Leo Stevens. The jump was perfectly successful and through it new ideas for the making of the harness were obtained.

Boston Woman Sculptor Will Make Over Soldiers' Faces

New York, Nov. 9.—Mrs. Anna Coleman Ladd, a Boston sculptor, announced here today that the War department at Washington had accepted an offer of her services in France in reconstructing the features of soldiers whose faces have been marred by wounds. Mrs. Ladd is the wife of Dr. Maynard Ladd, who is now in France giving special aid to children. She said she would leave for France as soon as orders are issued by the War department.

Mrs. Ladd's plan, which was submitted to Major V. P. Blair of the War department, is to obtain a photograph of a wounded soldier which was taken before his face was marred. A plaster of paris cast of his marred face could then be taken, she explained, from which she would model with clay a cast of his features as shown in the photograph. From the completed cast a copper plate mask, silvered and painted flesh color, would be made, she said, which would be held in place by spectacle frames.

Omaha Jews Subscribe Their Quota to War Relief

The Jewish war relief board learned at a well attended meeting at the Lyric last night that Omaha was one of the few cities of the country which had subscribed more than its quota to the war relief fund.

Harry Zimmerman, chairman of the local board, presided and reports were made by Dr. Philip Sher and William Holzman on the general meeting in New York 10 days ago, to which they were the delegates from Omaha. There it was learned that Omaha had done its bit in helping to raise the fund.

Short talks were made by Rabbi Cohn and Rabbi Taxon and by Victor Rosewater and Harry Monsky.

The local committee will make a special effort to collect at once on the subscriptions so the amount will apply on the additional 10 per cent which has been promised by three different people.

The committee announced that it expects a week from Sunday to make a special collection drive.

Bee Is Most Popular Paper In Nebraska, Say Sailors

Five thousand apprentices and landsmen at the naval training station at Newport, R. I., reports the New York Times for Sunday, November 4, took a straw vote as to the best newspaper published in their respective states.

The Bee has the distinction of appearing in the column as the paper which the sailors voted the best paper in the state of Nebraska. The Louisville Courier-Journal and the St. Louis Globe-Democrat represent their various states. The Des Moines Tribune and the Kansas City Star are also on the roll of honor.

D. S. Fraser, auditor in the county clerk's office, found the citation in the New York paper and says that it agrees perfectly with his own judgment in the matter. He served in the First Nebraska regiment during the Philippine war himself.

"After all, what the soldiers like is the right attitude, and news," he said.

THERE IS NOTHING LIKE RIDING IN A BALLOON, SAYS MAHER

Having had the experience of aero-plane and submarine rides in days gone by, Major John G. Maher of the army building has long felt that there was but one more thrill coming to him.

He got that when he took a balloon ride from Fort Omaha. With Colonel Hersey for a pilot he sailed over the city for an hour.

As a result it is rumored around the army building that the office of the supply depot's disbursing officer will soon be vacant, for Major Maher wants to be transferred to Fort Omaha where he can ride in balloons every day.

"Ballooning is more thrilling than the wildest auto ride, its silence and calm smoothness of action make the noisy flight of the aeroplane lose all its attraction and there is no smoothing or other discomfort as in submarine sailing," said Major Maher. "I wish I were young enough and I would enlist with the rest of the students at Fort Omaha today."

"I took the flight to test my vestibular apparatus," said Major Maher. "I found it was working perfectly. Ballooning is like riding on air, and you don't have to think about running over anybody. You have a free road.

"One gets a wonderful view of the country from a height of several thousand feet. It is strange and rare. As I looked down upon Miller and Hanscom parks, they seemed like city lots. Building 10 and 15 stories high looked like cracker boxes."

"The balloon is very important in this war; its value depending upon the observer. Applicants at Fort Omaha are given a rigid test and those admitted are a picked lot, indeed."

In his second group "Vision Fugitive" by Massenet, again proved Mr. Seagle the master interpreter, and the three French songs, "Sainte Dorothe," "Papillons" and "Carnaval," by Fontaine, which Mr. Seagle substituted for others on the program, were every one of a different style, and makes us anxious to hear more from this composer.

A group of negro spirituals by Henry T. Burleigh brought some charming settings for several old negro melodies from the negro camp meetings. Mr. Seagle, like Mr. Brown, was generous with encores after each group, and the closing encore, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," in the Burleigh setting, was one of the most effective.

Mr. Brown and Mr. Seagle each had his own accompanist, and, although their names were not given upon the program, they will be remembered for their splendid accompaniments. H. M. R.

MUSIC

Tuesday Musical Opening Concert.

The Tuesday Musical club opened its season most auspiciously last evening at the Boyd theater, presenting Eddy Brown, violinist, and Oscar Seagle, baritone, in joint recital. To have two such artists together furnished the large audience of music lovers continuous delight throughout the program. Both Mr. Brown and Mr. Seagle seemed to have spent much thought and care upon the selection of each number, and they brought to us many novelties, showing how well worth knowing they are by masterful interpretations of them.

Mr. Brown, new to Omaha, did not take long to establish himself in high favor. He draws a sure and masterful bow, trained to the most exacting demands, interprets with authority, and his tone is anything he chooses to make it, either soft and caressing, broad or brilliant as the case may be. He opened the program with a concerto by Conus, unknown to Omaha heretofore, but a work of large scope. It opens with an Allegro Molto of brilliancy, and well-built climaxes, closes a poetic and melodious Adagio, and ends brilliantly with a second Allegro movement. His second group was made up of five shorter pieces, the familiar Bach Gavotte, played with an infectious rhythm; a broad-toned and reposeful Handel "Larghetto;" "Rondino," by Craner, and arranged by Mr. Brown, dainty and charming; "Players" by Sarasate, a lovely and much appreciated number, and "Guitar," by Moszkowski, full of brilliancy. His closing group brought besides the welcome "Oriental," by Cui, a dashing "Caprice No. 32," by Paganini, also arranged by Mr. Brown, and an elaborate "Rondo Papagano," by Ernest, of attractive thematic material and wide contrasts. Mr. Brown was recalled time and again, and added many extra numbers, both at the close and in the midst of his groups.

Last winter we had an opportunity of saying what we thought about the fine artistry of Oscar Seagle, and last night he demonstrated it to a much larger audience. He is a master of interpretation, and presents his songs with a thrill and vividness not soon forgotten. He gave a stirring presentation of the "Prologue" from "I Pagliacci," a number well suited to Mr. Seagle's fine baritone. He presented in the same group four old French songs with consummate restraint and skill, of which "L'amour de moi" and "Tambourin," the one of exquisite tenderness, the other joyous and suggestive of its name, especially are remembered.
