Society

Ask a Soldier for Thanksgiving Dinners Before Ball.
Who wants a real live soldier? We have them in all styles, types, sizes, blondes, brunettes, six-footers and little sawed-off ones, any kind you prefer. Of course, you can't have them to keep, but you may have as many as you like on Thanksgiving day. We are being submerged with invitations at The Bee office by the hospitable people of Omaha who want some soldier boys to help them eat turkey (it's 40 cents a pound, too). Many people designate what kind of a khaki-clad man they prefer. One very well known musician in the city asks that she be sent either former newspaper scribes or soldiers who enjoy music. Isn't that a good idea? You see they will have a mutual interest and things will go so smoothly. One little girl asks for a "nice looking brunette soldier," and we will do our best to send her the brunetteist one we can find.

New Jersey and Wisconsin men, Chicago, Kansas City and Louisville, Ky., men have been asked for. The Bee will do its best to connect the right soldier with the right host and hostess, monumental task though it be.

Two boys from the country were invited by one couple because they would have such good appetites. I trust that the rural lads will live up to their reputation.

Not one hungry or lonely Sammy in the Gate City on Thanksgiving day, is our motto. Don't you think it a good one?

If you do, fill out one of the blank invitation slips printed in The Bee, asking as many men as there is place around your board.

Supreme Style And Simplicity

Supreme Style And Simplicity

BLUE serge and black satin present perennial perfection for all street dresses. This combination embodies supreme style and utility. A woman thus garbed need never be intimidated by any situation, psychologic or material. She is dressed for any part! The novel treatment of kimono sleeves of blue serge, buttoned on a long waisted bodice of black charmeuse heavily braided in navy blue soutache, lifts this dress into immediate distinction. A section of charmeuse braided like the waist is set in

When Milady Goes Shopping

There was a big sale the other day. I attended. Did you? Judging from the crowd you must have been.

ADELAIDE KENNERLY.
I might have known it! And yet I deceived myself by telling "me" that I would go to the blouse sale so very early that the sales girls would not all have arrived.

Advertised! Oh, yes! Advertised in the newspapers and displayed in the windows of one of Omaha's retail establishments. And this advertising spread the germs of thrift into every corner of the city.

Eight-thirty a. m., and not a minute later, found me sailing up to the counters-and-counters of beautiful crepe and silk waists and blouses (pardon, but the waists are under $5—blouses over), where I had fully expected to select the loveliest blouse in the lot for the least money, while some energetic sales-person removed two hats and a slip-over veil.

But, alas! How many dreams go wrong! How many discords mar the song!

When I entered the blouse section there stood a mass of seething humanity—feminine humanity—pushing, rushing, grabbing and nabbing, collecting and selecting blouses already stamped on their memory from reading the ads and gazing longingly into the window display.

They seemed to be posted on valves and prices. I was amazed at the sameness of that crowd. There were "beg pardons," "excuse mes," and "awfully sorries" sprinkled about which made life more bearable, while we tried to stretch our dollars, but no one was dismayed or discouraged. "Cash and carry" seemed to prevail. Only a few stood back with lorgnette and swathing furs, and ordered their purchases sent home.

These women fitted and matched and examined. It seemed that each one had a waist in mind—and each one found it there.

Really a bargain? Yes, indeed! I am sure of that. Blouses at $7.50 the day before became waists on this sale morning at $4.95, a saving of $2.55. Isn't that worth scrambling for?

Any sensible woman, any woman with a spark of patriotism who exerts herself to keep up a standard of the sleeve above the wrist. A deep border of charmeuse finishes the skirt. Blue braiding is also employed on this border. A touch of white charmeuse across the neck and on collar and cuffs completes this very unusual frock.

WHAT AMERICA MUST DO

In the Face of Russian Anarchy and Italian Reverses

Germany will be defeated by France, Great Britain and the United States, and at the last, the lion's share of the task will belong to the United States. This opinion, advanced by many competent observers since Russia's lapse into anarchy and Italy's staggering reverses, is accepted by our press in all parts of the land in a spirit of quiet and unflinching resolution. "We have drawn the sword and we might as well throw away the scabbard," exclaims the Chicago Herald, "for it is to be a fight to a finish and German successes in Russia and Italy indicate that the struggle may be prolonged."

The only German drive that the Allies have reason really to fear, many of our papers declare, is the coming drive for peace terms that will leave Germany secure in the possession of her present absolute control over middle Europe, and which will doubtless find expression through various pacifist outlets in America. "What I am opposed to is not the feeling of the pacifists," says President Wilson, "but their stupidity. My heart is with them, but my mind has a contempt for them. I want peace, but I know how to get it and they do not."

The leading article in THE LITERARY DIGEST for November 24th, deals with the present war crisis and it throws a flood of light upon the subject that is stirring the soul of America. Other important topics covered in this number of "The Digest" are:

"Digest" Readers Acclaim Its Worth from All Quarters of the Globe

From the steaming jungles of Senegal, the fertile plains of the Argentine, the temple shades of Japan, the teak forests of Burma, the coco-palms of Hawaii, the blue-gum groves of Australia and the far-flung acres of Saskatchewan, a single-mail recently brought to the editors of THE LITERARY DIGEST a sheaf of letters telling of the writers' gratitude for the opportunity afforded by this most comprehensive of news-recorders of keeping posted on all the great events of the day. Other letters tell how it keeps the prospectors in a far-western mining-camp in touch with the world's affairs and how it is passed eagerly from hand to hand by the "Tommies" and "Sammies" in the trenches on the Somme. Wherever men gather together it is read from cover to cover for its crisp, condensed, and wholly impartial summaries of current happenings. It is cosmopolitan in its scope and universal in its sympathies. To read it is to become a citizen of the world.

Married Life Difficult?

In most cases it is not friction makes marriage so difficult, for human beings are not as a rule sensitive enough to be maddened by trifles. What happens more often is the growth of monotony. It is as if the whipped cream of love had been made into a pudding. (A pudding is an excellent thing, but still . . .) It is true that marriage often allays in men the desire for adventure, and it is well that it should be so, for a world composed entirely of Don Juans of all ages would be chaotic, uncomfortable, and ill-furnished with the necessities of life. Life in the midst of continually recurring domestic revolutions would become a little too romantic, and so we must not weep too long over the young hero with the curly fair hair, who has forgotten all his dreams and is well content with his small home, for the curly hair must grow gray or, what is worse, fall off. This sounds like a platitude, but it is true all the same, and one cannot too often remind mankind that the later years are longer than the early years. That is where marriage scores a heavy point, but, on the other hand, it does tend to dull the edge of men's venturesomeness; often it makes them too content, and much more often it makes them too dull to conceive again the quest of the golden girl, for they have at home, shall we say the silver-gilt girl, and it is regretfully that I imagine their content, for I should prefer a world where the race of delights would be longer and pleasures have less untirable faces.—W. I. George in Harper's Magazine for November.
