STOCK FEEDERS GATHER IN FORCE AT STATE FARM

Nearly 250 Discuss Possible Substitutes For Corn and How to Meet Unusual Demand For Pork.

Lincoln, Neb., 27.—Approximately 250 farmers and stockmen were in attendance at the annual stock feeders' day at the state farm. It was essentially a feeders' get-together meeting with short talks, general discussion of the merits of different rations, and an inspection of test stock. Unusual importance attended many of the discussions because of the high cost of corn this year and the necessity of finding as far as possible economical feeds.

Dean E. A. Burnett of the college of agriculture urged that farmers be to the assistance of the government in raising as many hogs as possible in view of the demand for pork in the army. E. Z. Russell of Omaha explained that if every farmer will raise an extra litter of pigs Nebraska will accomplish its part in the hog campaign. Considerable discussion centered on methods of making use of the large quantities of soft corn which are reported in the state. Dr. J. H. Gain of the department of animal pathology warned against feeding moldy corn to horses, although it can be fed to pigs and cattle. Soft corn, not moldy, however, can be fed with perfect safety. Prof. H. J. Gramlich and Prof. E. L. Jenkins outlined the various feeding experiments that the university is carrying on.

This information was conveyed to Prof. C. W. Pugsley of the extension service on the occasion of his recent visit to Washington. The University Place plant has just made its report of work accomplished during the summer and fall. Twenty-two different products were cared for at the plant and an aggregate number of 1,071 trays of vegetables and fruits were dried. Apples headed the list with 305 trays, corn was second with 300 trays, and beans third with 150 trays. Among the other products were cabbage, peas, pears, parsley, potatoes, raspberries, squash, mint, spinach and onions.

Pool has been away much of the time of late, but it was supposed that he had been appraising school lands, so when the letter came, fears were entertained he had been pulling off something not in the book. However, the force quieted down when Mr. Pool came in little later and squared the matter by saying a nephew in Kansas wore the same label as himself and had a right to get married if he wanted to.

ASKS STATE'S AID IN CONSERVING MEAT

Drouth-Stricken Texas Cannot Handle Cattle There Because of Drouth and Feed Shortage.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 27.—(Special.)—Drouth-stricken Texas is calling upon Nebraska to take part of the southwest's cattle in an effort to conserve the future meat supply of the country. This information is conveyed in telegrams and letters to C. W. Pugsley, director of the extension service of the College of Agriculture.

"If consistent with your judgment please have county agents urge farmers and stockmen to purchase stocker cows and heifers either from drouth area or on various markets at once," said one telegram. "Excellent cattle young at very cheap prices. We must preserve the breeding cattle of the country."

Because of the serious situation thousands of cattle on the southwest ranges will either have to be sacrificed to the packers or will have to be shipped elsewhere. Government officials now in Texas are making effort to save the cattle for the country by selling it to farmers and stock raisers in the north.

Cattle Well Bred

The predominating breed of cattle in the southwest is Hereford, but there are some Angus and shorthorn cows and heifers available. The Texas cattle are well bred and although thin at present will make excellent breeding stock. Yearling heifers are selling at $35 to $45, 2-year-old heifers at $40 and $50 and young cows at $50 and up. T. Pryse Metcalfe, agent in animal husbandry at Amarillo, Tex., has the following to say about the method to secure these cattle:

Cattle Are Thin

"Of course the most of these cattle are thin and many of them are too thin and weak to think of trying to ship anywhere, in fact many of them could not be driven to the shipping station, but while this is true there are thousands of cattle where the range has been better or small show-ers have fallen or where the owners had not stocked heavily that are in good condition and strong enough to ship anywhere and I feel that if taken to your section and given plenty of good roughness with some cotton seed or oil cake and some protection should do well. I know that cattle are wintered there and if taken care of properly I believe they will do well."

Buy On Markets

"Men wanting cattle in less than lots of 100 should do one of two things: either go or send to the Kansas City or other western markets where thousands of drouth-stricken cattle are going and these buy in any desired size bunches they want, or several of them go together, bunch their orders and send one man down to purchase all the cattle desired, in one lot, then divide them out after reaching home."

"By doing this they can get better cattle and for less money and the expense will be greatly reduced. I believe the better way is the last, as the best cattle are being retained at home rather than sacrifice on the market as cannors, but they will sell if anything like a decent price can be obtained. If the county agents or some other agency could be put to work getting these small orders and consolidating them, and sending to the range for the cattle in large lots much more could be done and I am certain the result would be more satisfactory all around."

Dodge, Neb., Nov. 27.—(Special.)—Dodge is facing a real strike on account of the high cost of living. They all signed except one whose parents objected and the principal who is about to be drafted.

They were notified by the board to meet them at the school house Friday evening. The teachers were there and waited about an hour, but the members of the board failed to show up. This morning all the children were at school on schedule time, but the teachers stood pat and did not appear.

MENTION CORNISH FOR U. S. SENATOR

Name of Judge of Supreme Court, Who Was High Man at Last Election, Used in Connection With Candidacy.

(From a Staff Correspondent) Lincoln, Nov. 27.—(Special.)—The name of Judge Albert J. Cornish of the supreme court is being passed about by republicans in connection with the nomination for the United States senate at the next primary.

Judge Cornish admitted to The Bee today he had received several letters urging him to get into the race and that a number of republicans had spoken to him about it. However, he was not in a mood to say whether the matter interested him other than that he feels it is an honor to even be mentioned for the place.

Judge Cornish showed himself to be exceedingly strong with the people of the state in the late election, polling more votes than any other candidate on the judicial ticket for supreme judge. The vote stood: Cornish ... 121,934; Sedgwick ... 112,759; Morrissey ... 120,256; Barnes ... 109,722; Fawcett ... 115,856; Martin ... 106,224; Dean ... 113,151; Haglins ... 109,805.

Judge Morrissey for the chief justiceship was the only one of the judges who came anywhere near the Cornish vote on that ticket.
