NEVILLE FINDS MEN HAPPY IN CAMP FUNSTON

Governor of Nebraska Returns With Glowing Account of Satisfaction of Boys Over Their Treatment.

Lincoln, Feb. 11.—(Special).—Everything at Camp Funston is in fine trim, the men are happy and contented, waiting patiently for orders starting them to France.

This is the message which Governor Neville brings from the camp where with Adjutant General Clapp, Vice Chairman Comptrol of the Council of Defense and Private Secretary Lee Metcalfe, he attended the dedication of the Nebraska building for the use of the Nebraska men in camp there.

The Nebraska men in the camp make up nearly the entire unit of what is known as the 314th ammunition train of a little more than 1,000 men. The building was built from subscriptions received and cost approximately $8,000 of which $6,000 has been paid and the rest is in sight.

There was no place in that part of the camp where the men could go for recreation, reading or rest or to receive their families or friends. The building was erected in nine days.

With the exception of two or three expert carpenters, the work was all done by the Nebraska boys themselves and it is strictly a Nebraska building. It has a large floor space seating comfortably 1,400 men with a stage for entertainments and motion pictures and small reading and lodging rooms.

The governor and his escort reached Funston Friday afternoon after being met at Manhattan by an officer and taken 14 miles in an automobile to the camp where they were met by Captain J. D. Telford, commander of the division. After being escorted over the entire cantonment by the captain, Governor Neville and Vice Chairman Comptrol were taken to Fort Riley as the guests of Captain Telford, while General Clapp and Captain Metcalfe were taken in hand by the officers of the camp and were their guests during the time they remained in Funston.

Guests at Banquet

Saturday morning they reviewed the ammunition train, saw one company in the gas mask drill, inspected the trenches and had a visit with the Nebraska men. In the evening they were the guests of honor at a banquet given by the officers of the camp. The afternoon was devoted to the exercises in connection with the dedication of the Nebraska building, an address by the governor and music by the regimental band.

Sunday morning the governor and his party paid their respects to Colonel Winn, commander of the camp.

According to the governor, the men are contented and happy. They are beginning to get used to camp life and are now able to save quite a little from the ration allowance, so that they buy luxuries, chicken being the principal extra.

Colonel Duval, the governor discovered, was a graduate of the same military school the governor attended and that the colonel's brother was a classmate of the governor during the time he was in school.

Hospitals in Fine Trim.

An investigation of the hospital disclosed that facilities for taking care of the sick are as well provided as at the average hospital and that there appears to be plenty of help. Of the more than 40,000 men who have been at Funston, but 190 have died. At this time there is an epidemic of mumps, but not of a serious nature. The camp is just like a big family, according to the governor, and the non-commissioned officers receive consideration from their superiors in a way that indicates military rank has not entirely killed the brotherly feeling among the men who will have to fight shoulder to shoulder in trench and battlefield.

An interesting story was told the governor by Colonel Telford. In the first consignment of the draft which reached the camp was a member of the Industrial Workers of the World. He was frank in admitting his identity with that body and protested against being forced to enter the camp for military instruction. He told the colonel that he thought it was no more than right that he should know he was an Industrial Worker of the World. The colonel instructed the captain of the company to keep his eye on the man. After being in the camp about a month the man developed tuberculosis. It was decided to give him his discharge. The man cried and said he did not want to leave the service.

"I see things differently now," said he, "and I never was so well used in my life. Isn't there some way I can stay in the service? I want to fight for the old flag."

It was finally decided to give him a chance and he was sent to one of the southern camps.

Lincoln Highway Consuls Hold Meeting at Fremont

State Consul George F. Wolz of the Lincoln Highway called a meeting of all local consuls Saturday at Fremont to discuss the problem of obtaining federal aid on the highway. The Lincoln Highway runs on the Union Pacific railroad right of way for more than 100 miles through the state, and the Washington authorities have decreed that no federal aid will be given on that account.

It is up to the several counties having this problem to face to either change the route or get county money by a levy on through grading or paving districts.

Fremont and Dodge counties have lined up six miles west of Fremont for concrete, most of the property owners having already signed up. This paving district runs back two miles on either side of the highway, and the tax is from $4.50 an acre on abutting property and graduating down to lesser tax as the zones of 40 acres each recede from the highway.

State Engineer George E. Johnson went into the federal aid proposition thoroughly. "England, during the first year of the war, stopped building roads. Today, as a result, she has found her mistakes and is spending three times as much money building highways as in normal times," said the state engineer.
