RABBITS TO SAVE FOOD SITUATION, AVER BREEDERS

Nebraska Association Urges
Every Family to Maintain
Plot for Raising of Bunnies for Meat.

The business of breeding rabbits for food will go a long way toward saving the produce situation now facing the country, according to C. R. Pinneo, president of the Nebraska Rabbit Breeders' association.

The Rabbit Breeders' association, which meets the second Monday of the month in the Douglas county court house, will inaugurate a campaign to obtain more members at its next session, to which the public is invited.

President Pinneo in a statement declares:

"A United States governmental report states that every farm in the country must support four families—that is, the farmer must raise enough crops to supply his own family and three other families who live in cities or towns and who raise nothing. That is what makes prices so high and that is why there are always big opportunities for those who have heretofore never been producers of food, but who will start to be in their spare time."

"Not every one need raise wheat nor corn, nor oats, nor vegetables. Not every one need raise cattle, or sheep, or horses. Not every one need have an orchard nor a meadow, nor a silo. America's wants in food are so varied and diversified that the man or woman who raises any kind of food helps to keep the cost of living down, and also adds wonderfully to his own income."

Money to Be Made.

"There is as much money to be made from the back yard or a vacant lot, if the right kind of crops be raised thereon, as there is from a farm or a big orchard, but you must choose your crops carefully. You must not attempt to compete with the farmer who has the enormous farm to work on. To help out the one who has a desire for back yard farming I would suggest raising the Belgian hare. It is without doubt the most profitable animal raised which can be handled in a small way at first. It multiplies very rapidly, is easy to take care of, and there is a constant demand for all that you can raise, both for breeding and for sale as food. Game is rapidly disappearing from our markets and something must take its place to appeal to those who love the game flavor and exotic thrill which such things give to the palate."

"Remember Aladdin and his wonderful lamp? All he had to do was to rub the lamp and wish and he got everything he wished for."

"In this day and age we have no wonderful lamp, but what more could we wish for than the Belgian hare, New Zealand red or Flemish giant. With them you can wish for profits and realize your wish. You can raise these rabbits, which are more substantial than ordinary rabbits, in your own lot and make money. They can be bred from four to six times a year, with litters averaging from six to 12, and these can be sold at good prices as a food commodity and breeding purposes."

Idle Time Utilized.
"The amount of profit thrown away in idle moments that might be utilized with profit in raising rabbits, especially for one's own table use, cannot be easily computed, but it is enormous, to say the least."

"A dozen breeders require little time to feed, and if properly handled, will easily supply the table of a large family with meat. Considered from the standpoint of the amount of nourishment to be obtained from rabbit meat and the ease with which it is obtained, together with the assurance of its cleanliness, it is to be wondered at that every family does not produce its own meat supply."

"The initial investment necessary to start the business is no greater than the amount required for a proper start raised in sections of towns and in cities where poultry keeping is prohibited. It is not to be contended that rabbits will take the place of poultry. In the item of egg production alone the hen will hold her place in the esteem of the public."

Government to Help.
"The United States Department of Agriculture, which has heretofore given little or no attention to the culture of rabbits, is at the present time doing considerable to encourage an increased interest in the breeding of this little animal. This is gratifying to the promoters of the industry, in as much as the department never encourages an industry which has no well-defined commercial value."

"Of all the 'backyard industries' rabbit craft offers the best opportunities. Rabbits make no noise. If properly fed and cared for there is no odor about them. They require a very small amount of space. They can be fed before daylight and after night-fall, which is of considerable importance to the man who goes to work at 7 o'clock in the morning and does not return until 5 o'clock in the evening, especially during the winter months. The fact that the young are taken care of by the doe rabbit must not be overlooked as an item versus chickens."

Will Eat Anything.
"Our government has asked that everyone raise a small garden, for their own use in order that we might have more for our boys at the front as well as our allies. It is the patriotic duty of everyone to do this, and if it is our duty to raise garden truck, why not go a little farther and add a couple of rabbits, as they can be raised on the off-fall of your garden. A rabbit can be fed cabbage leaves, carrot tops, beet tops, weeds, grass and clover may be fed green, while any kind of hay is good for winter feed—prairie grass, timothy, clover or alfalfa, together with oats, barley or mash, are also excellent feeds.

In starting, it is not necessary to go to the expense of building regulation hutches for them. A dry goods box three feet by four feet is plenty large, by covering the top with oil cloth so the rain cannot get in, and covering the front with one inch chicken wire, with a drop curtain of burlap to keep out the wind and rain, and a small box placed on the inside for a nest box where the doe can have her young. By following the above it can readily be seen that the cost of raising them is practically nil, while the space needed is so small it need hardly be mentioned."

"The rabbit is in my opinion the only solution to the meat shortage throughout this country. The object of this article is to impress upon you, that you are the person to raise rabbits, whether you be the man or woman, you cannot put off your duty by saying you cannot afford it or haven't the time. Our country needs an increase of meat, and everybody must help."

"The rabbit if bred is bound to have young, and the young are needed all over the country, so that the only limit to your income would be the number of rabbits you could raise."

M'KAY HEARING IS MARKED BY TILTS

Last of Alleged Jewelry Store
Bandits Demands Preliminary Hearing; Others Are Bound Over.

Sharp words between attorneys for Thomas McKay, one of the five alleged bandits who killed Detective Frank Rooney, and Deputy County Attorney Abbott marked the preliminary hearing of McKay in police court Saturday.

McKay, who has been recovering from a gunshot wound inflicted by police, through his attorney demanded that he be given a preliminary hearing.

Dolan on Stand.
The other four alleged bandits, Burl Kirk, Frank Martin, Samuel Stone and Harry Williams, have been bound over to the district court on the charge of murder.

Detective Dolan, partner of Rooney, was the first witness on the stand. McKay's attorney asked him directly: "Did you shoot McKay?" "I don't know, Rooney was there, too," declared Dolan.

McKay was bound over to the district court without bonds.

Mrs. C. E. Burmester Dies at Home of Daughter in Chicago

Mrs. C. E. Burmester died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. W. Neal, Oak Park, Ill., last Thursday. She was one of the pioneer residents of Omaha, coming to this city with her husband immediately after the civil war. Her husband, Charles E. Burmester, was an Omaha pioneer and well known citizen. She remained in Omaha until after the death of her husband February 17, 1916, when she went to Chicago to live with her daughter.

Mrs. Burmester was 79 years of age at the time of her death. The body will be brought to Omaha for burial. Funeral services will be held privately at the home of her son, C. E. Burmester, jr., 614 South Thirty-sixth street, Sunday. Interment will be in Prospect Hill cemetery.

Rail Officials Fail to Find Cause of Curtis Wreck

Assistant General Manager Thiehoff of the Burlington has returned from Curtis, Neb., where Tuesday afternoon passenger train No. 151 was wrecked by going into the ditch, killing two persons and injuring 55 more.

A thorough investigation into the probable cause of the wreck was made, but without results entirely satisfactory to the railroad people. They find that it was brought about by one of three causes. It was due to a broken flange on a wheel of one of the cars, a broken rail or a broken truck. Which of the three was responsible Mr. Thiehoff is unable to say, but he is inclined to the opinion that there was a broken wheel.

Wife's Unerring Aim is Source of Family Rows

Oscar Erickson, endeavoring to establish a defense to the charge of abandonment preferred by his wife Sarah, testified that she had been "talking with other men," and when he remonstrated with her they quarreled.

She threatened to throw a shoe at my head," he said, "and I, thinking she was afraid, told her to go ahead. She did. The next thing I knew she was sprinkling my face with some water." He asserted that at another time she became jealous of him and aimed a flat iron at his head. He dodged and caught it in the neck, he said. Judge Fitzgerald released him under $100 peace bond.

Two Arrested by Federal Agents on Dope Charge

Victor Lopez, a Mexican, and Charles Tyrrell, negro, were arrested by federal officers in a raid Friday night on a shack on Twelfth street, between Cass and Chicago streets. They are in the county jail on a charge of having "dope" in their possession. One-eighth of an ounce of cocaine was taken from them.

Not His Name.
In Dublin a jealous policeman caught a cab driver in the act of driving recklessly. The officer stopped him and said: "What's your name?"

"Yed better try and find out," said the driver peevishly.
"Sure, and I will," said the policeman, as he went around to the side of the cab where the name ought to have been painted; but the letters had been rubbed off.
"Aha!" cried the officer. "Now you'll give yourself into worse disgrace than ever. Your name seems to be obliterated."
"You're wrong," shouted the driver triumphantly. "Tis O'Sullivan's name—T. H. Youth's association."
