Little Insurance Talks By Henry H. Lovell, Insurer On Burglary and Theft Insurance

Unless our attention is especially called to them, we are apt not to know of many little characteristics of life; the life of the criminal world as well as of any other. The record of claims in the line of burglary insurance points clearly to some interesting traits of the class of artistic criminals who follow that calling. Did you think our losses were from the occasional petty sneak thief? No, our protection is against the systematic operations of those real geniuses we so often feel would have risen high in honorable callings.
