

ALLIES WILL WIN, BUT NOT WITHIN YEAR, SAYS HORD

President of Philippine Island Bank in Manila Passes Through Omaha Enroute to New York.

John Stryker Hord, president of the Philippine Island bank at Manila, P. I., who passed through Omaha Friday on his way to New York, says the allies will win the war eventually, but not within the next year.

Mr. Hord says the islanders are intensely patriotic and enthusiastic over the war situation and that many of them are anxiously waiting the call to go to France.

The Philippine bank at Manila subscribed $100,000 to the first Liberty loan and is now subscribing $600,000 to treasury certificates.

"A mistaken idea as to the value of the island exists in the minds of many Americans," said Mr. Hord. "They are an asset and not a liability. Ever since their acquisition they have been self-supporting and the shortage in production and exports at the present time is entirely due to the shortage of tonnage."

Aliens Under Control.

"The alien situation is well under control and the decrease in the number of troops has not been the cause of any great disorder."

"Fifteen German merchant ships interned at the outbreak of the war have been sent to the United States for use by the government in transporting supplies and troops to France."

Since leaving the islands Mr. Hord has given up his position as head of the internal revenue department there and has retired from the banking business. He had nothing to say about his future plans. "Just a business trip," as he characterized it.

"Police, Please Keep Off:" State Inspectors Are O. K.

L. J. Flynn, Carl A. Lambrecht and A. J. Tusa, inspectors of the state food, drug, dairy and oil commission, have been experiencing difficulties in their rooming house work here on account of lack of information as to their authority and identity.

The police have arrested them twice on complaint of women who believed they were imposing. Chief Dempsey has advised his men that these inspectors are working here under state authority.

These state inspectors are investigating all rooming and lodging houses having five or more rooms. Under the law these places must have state licenses and are subject to payment of license fees for inspection.

"Unsettled Weather" Forecast For Day of Big Parade

"Unsettled weather" is the forecast of the weather bureau for Saturday, the day of the big Liberty day parade. Hundreds of persons have been calling the weather bureau on the telephone to ask about the weather during the parade.

Charlotte Townsend and Myrtle Fitz Roberts, connected with the public schools in supervisory capacities, have completed details of the local campaign to weigh and measure 15,000 infants for the child welfare division of the State Council of Defense and according to a nation-wide "save-the-baby" project.

Those who are in charge of the work in Nebraska are Mrs. Draper Smith, Mrs. C. M. Wilhelm, Dr. H. Wild, Dr. Inez Philbrick, Miss Alice Florer, George Coupland and Dr. F. F. Whitcomb.

The local work will be done from April 10 to May 20, and the school houses will be used as centers. Mrs. C. W. Pollard will have charge of clerical work.

Jobbers May Obtain Rebate On Government Fuel Price

Under a recent ruling of the United States Fuel administration jobbers may obtain a reduction on the government price set at the mine and may retain the difference between the government price and price as the jobber's commission. This to be allowable only in case no charge is made to the retailer, thus fixing the price to the retailer at the government price at the mine.

If the jobber is the authorized purchasing agent of a retailer the jobber may make a charge of not to exceed 15 cents per ton to the retailer, thus putting the coal on the market at an increased price of 15 cents per ton to the consumer.

Tangier Drum Corps Forms War Savings Organization

Tangier Drum corps, composed of members of Tangier Temple Shriners, has organized a war savings society, to be known as "The Tangier Drum Corps War Savings society," at the instigation of Dr. Zoro D. Clark, who has charge of organizing war savings societies in the Masonic bodies of Omaha.

The officers are: Theodore E. Peterson, president; Henry E. Snyder, secretary. Meetings will be held twice a month. Each individual member will endeavor to organize societies in various districts, and will put forth every possible effort to aid in this great cause.

POLITICAL SHRAPNEL

No. Sir George M. Cohan Has Nothing On These Patriotic Candidates.

Failure to interest voters in problems of municipal government at this time has prompted many of the candidates to take up patriotic topics at the few meetings which are being held. Mayor Dahlman, for one, has been delving into the history of the country from July 4, 1776, to date. Others have been telling how "our forefathers brought forth on this continent a new nation," etc.

"I never went through such a dull campaign as far as politics is concerned, but the people seem to respond to patriotic thoughts," remarked a candidate.

It is evident that the local campaign has been eclipsed by the war situation.

Somebody who did not give his name said that politics make strange bedfellows. By scanning the arrangement of names of candidates for city commission in the sample ballot, which the election commissioner is having printed, it is observed that some queer associations of names appear.

Edward A. Smith, Mayor Dahlman and Al Schultz appear in the order named. This is what Vox Populi would call a "happenstance." Michael Mullin, Laurie J. Quimby and Willis C. Crosby appear in that order. John I. Tammosian and Paul B. Sutton are grouped together. W. F. Stoeker and W. L. Nichols are also bunched. W. G. Ure and Julius Smith Cooley are just ahead of Thomas E. Brady. Of course, the rotation of names may break these combinations now and then.

The name of the second Smith who filed will appear on the official ballots as "Edward A. Smith." The first petition filed by this candidate read "Ed A. Smith," but the first baptismal name was changed into the fullness of its spelling.

Ida O. Jorgensen is the only woman whose name will appear on the ballots. She is one of the socialist candidates for city commissioner and is the widow of Thor Jorgensen.

Junk Dealers Adopt Badge For Protection of Public

E. Vaks, president of the Omaha Junk Peddlers' Protective association, reports that the association is trying to protect both the patrons and their members by giving badges to all members and by urging their patrons to ask to see the badge before they buy or sell goods to a peddler.

The members maintain that this will do much to discourage work by unscrupulous dealers. The association holds regular meetings every two weeks at Wolfe's hall, Twenty-fourth and Charles streets.
