

MONSTER PARADE THRILLS MASSES WITH PATRIOTISM

Fifty Thousand Persons March to Demonstrate Patriotism in Liberty Line on Anniversary of War Declaration.

At more than a score of points the field marshals and captains and their aids were collecting their forces into units and before the starting gun was fired at 2 o'clock everybody was ready.

And promptly at 2 o'clock divisions Nos. 1 and 2 began the march. Division No. 1, with Major R. E. Firth as grand marshal, and Joseph Kelley, assistant marshal, started at Tenth street and marched west on Farnam street. Simultaneously, division No. 2, Colonel F. A. Grant, grand marshal, and Robert Manley, assistant marshal, and headed by the military, started at Twenty-fifth and marched east on Farnam street.

The divisions reached the reviewing stand in front of the city hall almost at the same time and but a few moments later the desired effect of the parade organizers was achieved, the two long lines of marchers were passing each other.

Throngs Cheer Marchers.

It was an inspiring sight when the first company of wholesalers in division No. 1 came face to face with the Fort Crook soldiers leading division No. 2 cheer upon cheer arose from the watching throngs.

As divisions Nos. 1 and 2 came to the end of their first march, the parade halted for the moment, while the military dropped out to form division No. 3. And, while divisions Nos. 1 and 2 stood in review, division No. 3, marching eight abreast, marched up Farnam street from Tenth to Twenty-sixth streets.

Then divisions Nos. 1 and 2 resumed their march, division No. 1 counter-marching back down Farnam street to Tenth street and division No. 2 counter-marching back up Farnam street to Twenty-fifth street.

Score of Bands.

More than a score of bands were interspersed throughout the marching divisions. Five of the bands were regimental army bands, one from Fort Crook and four from Camp Dodge. The Fort Crook band is the 41st infantry band. The Camp Dodge bands are the 352d regiment, 349th regiment, 163d depot brigade and the 34th field artillery. A dozen bands from out in the state and Iowa and several Omaha bands also marched and played patriotic airs.

Colonel Pickering, commanding Fort Crook; Colonel Hersey, commanding Fort Omaha; Mayor Dahlman, city officials, members of the Grand Army of the Republic, Dr. E. E. Violette, who is to speak at the Liberty loan mass meeting at the Auditorium tonight, and others occupied the reviewing stand opposite the city hall and reviewed the long parade of marchers.

It was an imposing spectacle, the most imposing ever held in Omaha, and a new chapter was written in the history of the Gate City in the few hours during which the great parade took place. The whole parade moved with clock-like precision. There may have been little slips or delays here and there, but they went unnoticed in the magnitude of the pageant.

Army Officers March.

Division 2, perhaps, was a little more impressive than division No. 1, for it was in division No. 2 that the uniformed marchers were found. At the head of the section was Colonel Grant and Robert Manley, followed by Major John G. Maher, Major Walter Stern, Captain William Farinagy, Captain Ada Lepphardt, Captain Walter Krusie, Captain E. G. Kerfoot, Ensign F. G. Condit and several visiting officers from Camp Dodge.

Then came the 41st infantry band and the entire 41st infantry from Fort Crook, heads erect, knees high, stepping in perfect military marching form despite the bothersome cobblestones between the car tracks. Close upon their heels came a Fort Dodge band and the Fort Omaha troops and the force of the Omaha naval recruiting station, in company with a number of navy lads who are home on furloughs.

Following the jack tars came the high school cadets and the Creighton cadets, a crack Boy Scout drill team, and the members of the force at the Omaha quartermaster's depot.

Thus was the first section of the second division exclusively military.

Impressive Joan of Arc.

Later in division No. 2 came the women's division, which rivaled the military section in impressiveness. At the head of the women's section two groups of pages, one in blue and the other in red, heralded with silver trumpets the coming of Joan of Arc. Mrs. Henry Doory impersonated the French heroine.

Miss Gertrude Young designed this part of the pageant, taking a page from an old French book as a model. The Maid of Orleans was mounted on a snow white horse with trappings of sky blue and clad in silver coat of mail. Over her shoulders fell a white satin tunic and her head was covered with a steel helmet from which waved a white plume. Then came the Red Cross workers.

Then, too, there were other sections not so spectacular, perhaps, but every bit as impressive. There was the little company of newsboys, the street urchins who sell daily papers on the corners. Their uniforms were their more or less worn and frayed business clothes and in some instances they were little better than tattered rags, but those 200 marching newsies, faces and hands shining with new cleanliness and proudly waving their American flags, served their purpose just as well as the immaculately uniformed, perfect marching soldier troops.

Business Is Suspended.

All in all it was a wonderful spectacle; a spectacle unequalled heretofore, and a spectacle the like of which probably will not be seen again in Omaha for many years, at least until the "boys come marching home." All Omaha turned out. Those who did not march in the parade paid their homage to those who did. It was practically a holiday, for the business of the city came to an almost complete halt during the hours of the parade. All of the big industries closed to permit their employes to march in the parade and those who found their business too absorbing to permit of the half-holiday shut up shop for the hours of the procession. It was a truly wonderful event, one which will live within the memory of an entire city.

Following is the order of the parade.

The Orchard & Wilhelm Co.
Announces a showing of Fine Oriental Rugs

Shipments received during the last few days have swelled our stock of Oriental Rugs to unusual proportions. The fact that very many pieces are fine examples and VERY INTERESTING, makes the collection one that EVERY LOVER of fine hand woven rugs will desire to see.

Permit us to indicate the possibilities of this exhibit

Kermanshahs	Saruks
One of the finest products of the Persian looms; in the weaving of which only the strongest cotton very finely spun is used, while the wool used for the nap is of the choicest quality, acquiring a luster almost like silk in course of time. The short cut nap lends it the appearance of a fine tapestry. In design, no particular pattern is adhered to; although the medallion effect generally predominates; the field is often treated with small figures while the several borders always attain real artistic merit. But the greatest attraction of the Kermanshah lies in its beautiful light tints and coloring that range through the softest of pinks, rose, blues, greens and ivory.	Are of very close texture. The colors that predominate are rich red, dark royal blue, and camel. The designs are purely Persian, quaint medallion effects, irregular and altogether unlike each other in shape. They usually have few borders, generally a wide floral border and two narrower ones on either side of the broad one. Saruks are very durable and suitable for rooms where the wear is hard.
Among our collection of Kermanshahs are the following: 10 ft. x 7 ft. 7 in. $425.00 7 ft. 5 in. x 9 ft. 2 in. $275.00 9 ft. x 11 ft. 10 in. $600.00 10 ft. 7 in. x 15 ft. $1,125.00 and a host of others.	8 ft. 6 in. x 11 ft. $650.00 4 ft. 6 in. x 7 ft. from $100.00 to $250.00 10 ft. 9 in. x 18 ft. 6 in. $1,350.00 3 ft. 6 in. x 5 ft. from $75.00 to $145.00 and many others.
Kazacks	Belouchistans
or Cossack rugs are easily distinguished from other Caucasian rugs on account of their heavy firm texture, while the bold striking figures and strong colorings at once betray their origin. Their durability is phenomenal.	are characterized in the main by their dark blue color with dark brown, red or green color as faint outlines for the border and peculiar geometric figures in the center of each rug. The dye and texture enriches with age becoming very fascinating.
5 ft. x 6 ft. 8 in. $82.50 4 ft. 10 in. x 7 ft. 8 in. $77.50 5 ft. x 7 ft. $60.00 3 ft. 10 in. x 5 ft. 5 in. $57.50 and many others.	2 ft. 8 in. x 4 ft. 5 in. $84.50 3 ft. x 5 ft. $82.50 2 ft. 7 in. x 4 ft. 10 in. $80.50 and many others.
