GREAT BATTLE NOW DEPENDS ON FOCH'S RESERVE

Director of British War Office message says: Declares Struggle or West Front Will Be Won by Allies.

London, April 26 .- "In the end it will be a question of who has the last reserves," said General Delma Radeliffe, chief director of military operations at the war office, in a review of the western front situation this after-

"These reserves on the western front are now in the hands of General Foch, in whom both armies have the fullest confidence. He so far has employed only a small proportion of his available reserves."

"The net result in the Kemmel sector so far is that the Germans have gained about 2,000 yards on a front of about 1,200 yards. This gain is not large, but it involves very important ground and there is no question that it is a very serious loss.
No Decisive Gain.

There is nothing decisive about the loss of Kemmel hill, but it is one of the most important tactical features, as the hill is an observation point for all the ground to the north. It still remains to be seen, however, whether it will remain in the enemy's

"Our line to the north is all right

In alluding to the fighting on the western front since April 23, General Radcliffe said:

"In all the fighting since this date we see the Germans at their old game of striking at the junction between the British and the French. It is still clear that the German's intention is to wear out the British army. He has been unable to break the line or divide the British and French, in sending French troops to the north front, making it more difficult for the Germans to continue their game of fighting the British alone. "There is no reason to alter the view that a big offensive on a far greater scale than ever is still to be expected between Arras and Amiens, with the object to drive in and separate the British and French. So far the whole enemy success has been merely tactical. He has won ground

Amsterdam, April 26.-According to the Budapest newspapers, Joseph Szyerinyi, minister of commerce, has failed to form a Hungarian cabinet in succession to Dr. Wekerle, who re-cently resigned. Szyerinyi's failure was due to the demand made by the Karolyi and socialist parties that Parliament be dissolved in the autumn, if the lower house failed to pass the electoral reform bill in its original form. The newspapers say Dr. Wekerle probably will be entrusted again with the formation of a cabinet.
