Unfaverable Weather and Faverable Interpretation of the "Hedge" Ruling Has Builish Tendency on Corn.

Chicage. April 28.—Corn prices averaged much higher today, owing to clearer knowledge of the attitude of the food administration in regard to hedging sales. The market, however, falled to hold advances, and closed unsettled at the same as Saturday's finish to %c up, with May $1.27% and July $1.49% $1.49%. Sharp upturns at the outset in the corn market promptly showed the influence of a fresh statement defining what kind of transactions would fall under the ban of the antihearding law even if similar business had heretofore been able to escape explicit of-ficial disapproval. The reassuring develop-ment from a bullish point of view was that the government does not make it obligatory on grain handlers to hedge holdings. Un-favorable weather tended also to lift the market, but sympathy with a break in the value of pasts led to realizing and to a con-
