

16 I. W. W. MEN TURNED OVER TO U.S. COURT

Judge Sends Lawyer to Jail, Scores Organization Members, Then Sentences 20 on Vagrancy Charge.

Sixteen members of the Industrial Workers of the World, who were arrested Friday and booked for investigation, were bound over to the federal government Saturday morning by Police Judge Madden.

The men were taken into custody when detectives raided the Industrial Workers of the World headquarters, 1301 Douglas street, and broke up a meeting on the second floor.

John Edenstrum, 1407 North Seventeenth, appeared as counsel for the men and was arrested by Court Bailiff Wilson when he attempted to create agitation among the 16 prisoners in the court room.

Lawyer Sent to Jail. He was given 30 days in jail, after which time he will be turned over to federal authorities.

Standing before the court with 20 other prisoners, arrested during the night by detectives on charges of vagrancy, the 16 members of the Industrial Workers of the World stoutly attested their faith and affiliation to the organization.

When Edenstrum, representative of the organization, attempted to make plea for the prisoners, the city prosecutor asked him if he was admitted to the Nebraska state bar.

Edenstrum is Challenged. "No, I am not admitted to the bar," Edenstrum replied. "But as chosen representative of the advocates of the laboring class, I mean to defend them."

Police say Edenstrum is the most ardent agitator of the local organization of the Industrial Workers of the World.

Twenty other prisoners were given various jail sentences for vagrancy. Detectives made the rounds of hotels of the lower class early Saturday morning and arrested 15 guests. They were aroused from their sleep and taken to jail to face court. All denied membership in the Industrial Workers of the World organization, but admitted they were without work.

Detectives aroused five guests of the Owl hotel from their sleep and arrested them for vagrancy. Three men were taken from the Elm hotel. Four persons were arrested in the Continental hotel for refusing to work at useful employment.

Judge Scores Prisoners. Addressing the 16 Industrial Workers of the World, Police Judge Madden said:

"You all must realize the extent of this recent addition law. You are physically able to work, and unless you refrain from your dastardly work of obstructing the duties of the government, you will be interned in prison. Anyone traveling aimlessly through the country, as you fellows have been doing, is an enemy to the government, and this will be stopped."

"The quicker you eliminate these technical ideas from your heads, the better you will fare with the government."
