REPUBLICANS IN WASHINGTON ARE TALKING ISSUES

Proximity of Election Time Brings Subject to Front; Extravagance Counts Against Democrats.

By EDGAR C. SNYDER. Washington Bureau of

The Omaha Bee, 1311 G Street. Washington, May 26.-Republican eaders in congress, as election time approaches and primaries are under way, are beginning to discuss the issues the republican party should make predominant before the people in the campaign of 1918. Having always represented the constructive and progressive thought of the country, it is naturally to be expected that republican leaders will meet the needs of the present critical hour by formulating policies and plans for the conduct of national affairs during the war and thereafter

It is the general thought among the thinking men of the republican party that the tariff must necessarily have a most conspicuous place in the "If the voters send to congress men who will enact a judiciously adjusted tariff, holding up good wages to decided weight in republican party councils.

Extravagance a Factor. Other leaders suggest that the American people must be informed of the extravagances which have attended the prosecution of the war and if these extravagances can be brought home, it will make the winning of a republican senate and house that much easier.

Thinking people are looking for a 'preparedness for peace" plan which Lothrop—The Turn of a Card, and the many troubles that can follow the winner are portrayed by J. Warren Kerrigan here for the last times today. will furnish employment for thousands of skilled and unskilled laborers. The United States and our possessions contain natural resources of enormous extent and value, and still undeveloped. neers and laborers, and will encourage the cultivation of broad areas now unproductive and valueless. "In time of war prepare for peace," is a motto which is guiding the destiny of more than one nation. Shall we be unmindful of its import at this time? To our allies in the great struggle we have advanced millions of dollars. For our own needs we must find additional millions after the war to promote industry, to stimulate home building, and to encourage greater food production. The time is ripe for the making of preliminary studies and preparation of plans so that actual construction can be undertaken at the end of the war. No large expenditures will be required to do this, as the forces employed will be small. Several years will be required to develop plans and other details, and this time should be employed now rather than after the war's slogan of the republican should be "A ready made home for
