

GERMANS STRIKE FOR MARNE RIVER IN NEW THRUSTS

Baffled in Former Efforts, Enemy Plans Advance Southward Before Foch's Army Can Call Halt.

Baffled in their efforts to strike eastward and westward from the new salient in the allied lines, the Germans are attempting to reach the Marne with their heavy forces before the allied resistance becomes strong enough to halt them entirely. In the center, however, the enemy progress is slackening as the allied reserves are being thrown into the battle.

Heavy Fighting Continues All Along the Arch-shaped Salient from Soissons to Rheims.

Struggle as they will against the French defense on the west around Soissons, the Germans are unable to gain. In the region of Rheims the same story is true, as the British and French divisions there stand firm.

Would Outflank Allies.

By penetrating to the Marne or southward from Fere-en-Tardenois, seven miles north of the river, which they now hold, the Germans apparently hope to spread out eastward and westward, as they failed to do further north, and thus outflank the strong allied positions at Soissons and at Rheims. French resistance in the center, however, is growing in strength and the Germans are getting farther and farther away from their original base along the Ailette.

Paris and London View the Situation More Favorably and in Neither Capital is There Fear the German Offensive Will Become as Serious as a Menace to the Allied Defense as the Original Onslaught in March.

Foch May Strike.

Although the German salient is about 18 miles deep in the center, Paris is not much nearer, nor has the enemy advance yet affected the allied lines eastward from Montdidier. In fact, the Germans would be in a dangerous position should General Foch strike eastward along the Aisne from Soissons. This may be the purpose of the allied strategy in holding strongly on the flanks as the Germans get deeper and deeper into the pocket toward the Marne.

Berlin Claims the Capture of Much War Material, Including a Number of the Larger French Guns.

The number of prisoners is now said to be more than 35,000.

West of Montdidier the American Troops Still Maintain their Hold on Cantigny, Despite German Counterattacks.

The Americans in their successful advance captured 242 prisoners.

Pershing's Army and the Mule; 'Mule Skinners' Can't Cuss 'Em

The United States is sending so many thousands of army motor trucks to France that one might think the army mule was a thing of the past, but that's a mistake.

A few glimpses at the vivid scenes taken at the American front as they will appear in "Pershing's Crusaders," the great war feature film made by the government, at the Brandeis theater next week, show the army mule just as rampant as ever.

His long ears and benign expression are at the front wherever food or shells are needed by our boys in the trenches. And he is just as unconquerable as ever, as one scene will prove. In this scene one sturdy bray artist has apparently been mistaken and thinks he is being ridden by a German. He gives a very good imitation of a trench mortar, to the delight of the bystanders. The victim of mulish frightfulness is not so delighted.

A recent army officer forbade a teamster to speak profanely to his team even if he feels it necessary. Perhaps that explains the army mule in France looking so "fat andassy"—at least on the screen.

Amusement Parks Get Big Play on Memorial Day

There was gloom in the hearts of the managers of the amusement parks in Omaha on the morning of Memorial day, but when the sun came out bright and warm about 11 o'clock, the little troop of joys marched right in and more pink lemonade was ordered at once. Big crowds were reported at all three of the big parks, Manawa, Lakeview and Krug.

Twice Wed to Same Woman, Now Seeks Second Divorce

Twice married to the same woman and divorced once, all happy illusions of married life have been shattered for James W. Wright, he declares in a petition in which he again asks the district court to sever the marital ties which bind him to Lillian M. Wright. His petition recites that he and Lillian were married in South Omaha June 29, 1904; divorced July 10, 1916, and again married December 24, 1917. Wright alleges that he forgave Lillian on various occasions after she had abused him and abandoned home life and that her promises to "be good" were of little consequence in her young life.

Central High Cadets Get Touch of Army Life at Annual Encampment of Regiment

Mess Tent. No Place for Mr. Hoover.

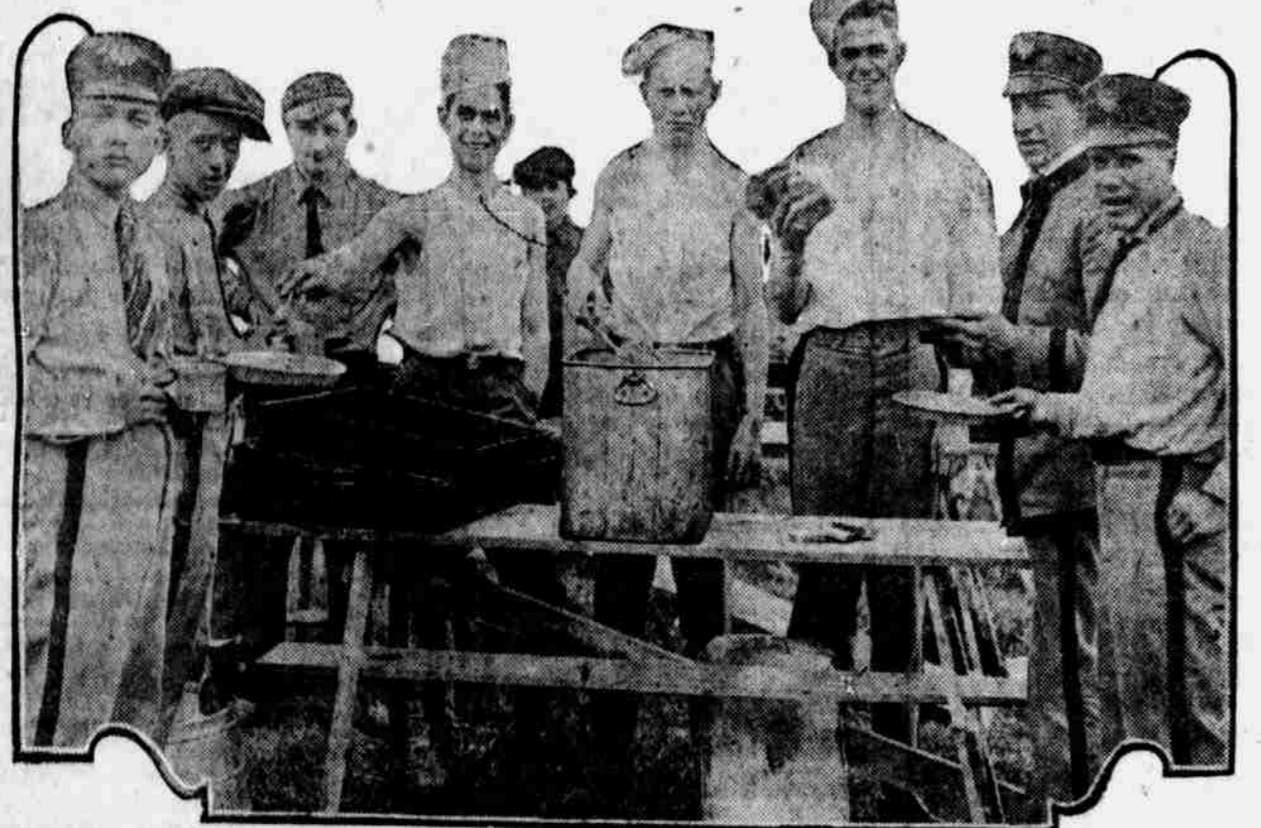

Yesterday was visitors' day at Camp Reed (Valley, Neb.), where the Central High school cadet regiment is encamped. A special train left Omaha at 9 o'clock yesterday morning bearing mothers, sisters and friends of the boys.

Drill was curtailed for the day to allow the young soldiers to shine their buckles and make ready for the coming of the fair sex. A full dress regimental parade was held in the afternoon to exhibit to the visitors the result of the week's training. A base ball game has been arranged between Central and South High school teams.

The visitors' train left the camp at 6:30. Routine was then resumed. The camp will be broken up this morning. The cadets will return on army trucks. They are expected to reach the city shortly after noon.

Manning, commander, was lost with most of the other officers.
