Twenty-Nine Empty Flasks in House Office Building Photographed as Evidence of Solons' Inconsistency.

Washington Bureau of The Omaha Bee, 1311 G Street. By EDGAR C. SNYDER. Washington, June 8.(Special Tele-

The conscience of the house has been greatly shocked over this discovery and there are rumors of an investigation in the air-and that is about all it will amount to, for some of the prohibitionist members of the house are going to have their "tipple," even if they are forced to buy t by the case.

He assented then asked him: 'After the ark had floated on the tempestuous seas for 40 days and nights, and as it descended upon the dry land, what was the first thing done by Father Noah? He did not know that exactly. "Well, said I, "did he not plant a vine?" Yes he remembered that. I asked him: 'Do you remember any great poet that ever illustrated the higher fields of humanity that did not dignify the use of wine, from old Homer down?' He did not. I asked: 'Do you know any great philosopher that did not use it for the exaltation of his intelligence? Do you think, doctor, that a man who lived upon pork and beef and corn bread could get up into the superior regions-into the ethereal? No: he must.

"Take nectar on high Olympus And mighty mead in Valhalla.' I said to him again, "Doctor, you are a scholarly man, of course-a doctor of divinity-a graduate of Yale; do you remember Plato's symposium?' Yes, he remembered that. And so, one after another, they were laid down on the lounges, in the Athenian style, except an old physician named Aristodemus, and Plato makes him the hardest-headed fellow except Socrates. inued in office for nearly 50 years, no natter what party had the house, talking the other day about the pro pensity for drink among the legislaors of the last century, told me an interesting story of a visit a New England friend of his paid to congress in 1850. This friend had a position in the gallery over the seat of Mr. Webster, who was to make his great speech on the compromise question. Before Mr. Webster began his address a page put upon his desk a refreshed himself several times in the course of the long speech he made, and at its conclusion Mr. Isaac P. to that thing, for it is my habit to Walker, democratic senator from Wisconsin, arose to reply, and as his seat was next to Mr. Webster he reached over and, pouring out a glass of water, as he supposed, drank it. Such a spluttering and gasping as followed disclosed the fact that the Massachusetts senator had been inspired in his great effort by Byron's source of inspiration-gin! The shouts of laughter which followed, in which Mr. Webster joined most heartily, and the confusion and loss of breath entailed on Mr. Walker, caused him to vied the floor to someone else. Silas Wright was another of those statesmen who needed a stimulant and found it before beginning an important speech in the cloak room, where a supply could always be obtained in those days. We have measurably progressed since those far-off times, although liquor is still to be had by those "wise" to conditions in both senate and house office buildings, as witness Exhibit A, consisting of 29 empty whisky bottles found by the janitor of the house office building one morning last week.
