"Dreamland Adventures"

By Daddy—"The Mad Giant"

A complete, new adventure each week, beginning Monday and ending Saturday.

(Last week Peggy, in her first Dreamland Adventure, was carried by her toy airplane to Birdland. There she was crowned princess. She bravely entered the dungeons of the Giant of the Woods and set all his bird captives free.)

CHAPTER I. The Call For Help.

PEGGY sat up straight in bed. Startled, she listened for a repetition of the mysterious sound that had awakened her.

Yes, there it was again—a sharp tapping at her window, followed by a gentle call, "Cool! Cool! Cool!"

Peggy rubbed the sleep out of her eyes and tried to see who it was. Day had just dawned and the light came dimly through the curtains.

"Can it be a burglar?" thought Peggy, shivery chills running up and down her back.

Again came the tapping and the gentle "Cool! Cool! Cool!"

"A burglar wouldn't have such a soft, sweet voice," Peggy assured herself. "It sounds like a pigeon."

Her first fright gone, she jumped out of bed and ran to the window. Sure enough, there outside the screen was a pair of pigeons.

"Cool! Cool!" they called to her. "Whose, how do you do?" cried Peggy, throwing open the screen. In hopped the pigeons and one of them gravely held up its foot.

"Oh, you want to shake hands, just like my puppy!" exclaimed Peggy, delightedly. Then she saw that something was fastened to the pigeon's leg. It brought to mind what her father had told her the night before—that the pigeons used to be fastened to rings around their legs.

"You're carrier pigeons!" she cried. "Have you a message for me?" "Cool! Cool!" answered both pigeons. Peggy was now all curiosity. Unwrapping the message from the pigeon's leg she found that it was a piece of water lily pad covered with a lot of odd-looking holes.

Puzzled and a bit disappointed she held the message one way and then another without being able to read it. Finally she turned it over and at once the mystery was solved. There was a note neatly pricked into the leaf. It read:

"Greetings, Princess Peggy! The Giant is rampaging! Come, else we perish! Your Birdland Subjects."

Down below was added: "Written by me, Judge Owl."

Peggy caught her breath. Here was an appeal from Birdland that seemed urgent. She didn't know what "rampaging" meant, but it sounded like something awful, and her first encounter with the Giant of the Woods had led her to believe he might do anything wicked. Of course, she must answer this call from her subjects.

She turned quickly to the toy airplane that had borne her so bravely on her first flying adventure. Then her heart sank. It seemed so tiny and lifeless now as it lay on the shelf and utterly powerless to carry a big 9-year-old girl far away through the air for a possible clash with a giant.

"I do want to help the birds, but oh, how can I get to Birdland?" she said.

As if in answer, the second pigeon held up its leg. To it was fastened another message. Unwrapping this Peggy found a blade of grass and this verse:

"Remember the effects of the leaves of the Wishing Rose in her former adventure. Peggy popped the grass into her mouth. Quick as a wink she found herself tiny as an elf, seated in her airplane, now quivering with power.

"Hasten, Princess!" called one of the pigeons, its cooing suddenly turning into talk which Peggy understood perfectly. "I am Homer Pigeon and this is Carrie Pigeon, and we're to show you the way!"

"I ought to dress first," protested Peggy. "I can't go in my pajamas." But the carrier pigeons didn't give her time to change. They at once darted out of the window. Peggy, seizing a hat pin, which she thought she might use as a weapon in case of danger, followed them, her airplane buzzing vigorously.

Peggy felt wonderfully gay and sprightly as she sped through the clear morning air, which seemed aglow with the warm colors of the rising sun. She was so happy in the joy of flying that she forgot for a moment the serious mission upon which she was bent.

"CAN IT BE A BURGLAR?" THOUGHT PEGGY.

"I'll race you to Birdland!" she called to the pigeons.

"Come on!" they answered, setting off at a great rate.

It was a jolly dash through the sky, with Peggy thrilling more and more with excitement as the airplane crept gradually up to the speeding carriers and then soared triumphantly past them.

She turned to wave excitedly, when her joy abruptly froze into fright. Swooping down upon the carriers from high above was a monster bird, its gleaming eyes and savage beak marking it as a seeker of prey. The pigeons saw it at the same moment.

"It's the pirate of the sky!" they shrieked. "Fly for your lives!" But they were an instant too late.

The feathered pirate was upon Homer Pigeon before he could dodge, clutching him in the cruel grasp of its powerful talons.

(Tomorrow it will be told how Peggy battles with the Pirate of the Sky high up in the air, with the life of the carrier pigeon at stake.)

Boys Write Home Mothers' Day from War Fields

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

Lincoln, June 10.—(Special.)—Mothers' day was observed "somewhere in France" by soldiers from the United States, though perhaps not in the way it was observed "at home," according to Captain Joseph Sargent, graduate of the University of Nebraska, class of 1898, from the engineering department. Captain Sargent is a captain of engineers in France and a veteran of the Spanish-American war.

In his letter to his sister, Miss Maria Sargent of Lincoln, Captain Sargent says that letter writing to the mothers at home was generally indulged in by the boys.

The captain says the French people are very industrious. None remain on the farms and in the small towns but the very old men and the boys and girls. But these are busy all the time and their gardens have been turned into grain fields and they are farming right up to the very edge of the battle lines. When a town is likely to be wiped out as the Germans advance, these people stick to the last minute and then move, generally assisted by some of the soldiers.

Hair Often Ruined By Washing With Soap

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary multifid coconut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get multifid coconut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months—Adv.

Railroad Men Protest at Time Zone Change

Hastings, Neb., June 10.—Clyde B. Aitchison of the Interstate Commerce commission today conducted a hearing here upon the changing of time zones. Congress has ordered the commission to establish new lines for the zones and the hearing here is one of many conducted in various parts of the United States for collecting information to establish these lines.

A number of railroad officials testified, the majority being opposed to changing the present lines. Divisions, they contended, have been established in accordance with such lines, so that crews do not run on both times at any point. A change such as proposed, they contended, would make it necessary for crews at some points to run on both times, and cause the maintenance of extra dispatchers. They held that confusion and danger would result.

Among the witnesses examined by Mr. Aitchison and his staff today were General Manager G. W. Holdrege of the Burlington, General Manager Walters of the Northwestern and General Superintendent Hall of the Rock Island.

Discovers magic ether compound which loosens a corn so it lifts right out

Good news spreads rapidly and druggists here are kept busy dispensing freezons, the ether discovery of a Cincinnati genius, which is said to loosen any corn so it lifts out with the fingers.

Ask at any pharmacy for a quarter ounce of freezone, which will cost very little, but is said to be sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply just a few drops on the tender, aching corn and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so shriveled that it lifts out without a particle of pain. It is a sticky substance which dries when applied and never inflames or even irritates the adjoining tissue.

The discovery will prevent thousands of deaths annually from lockjaw and infection heretofore resulting from the suicidal habit of cutting corns.—Advertisement.

OMAHA WOMAN GAINS 17 POUNDS BY TAKING TANLAC

Mrs. Cochran Now Does Own Housework—Her Strength Returns.

"I have not only gotten back the fifteen pounds which I lost while sick, but have actually gained two pounds besides, and I now enjoy the best of health," said Mrs. Maurice Cochran, who resides at 2564 Taylor street, recently, in relating her experience with the Master Medicine, Tanlac.

"A number of years ago," continued Mrs. Cochran, "I was taken with a pain all up and down my whole left side, which was so bad at times I became alarmed for fear I might be stricken with paralysis. Following this my health became badly broken and I suffered in many ways. My appetite was so poor that I could eat little, or nothing, and what I did eat formed gas and made me so miserable I could hardly stand it. I lost fifteen pounds in weight and nothing I ever did seemed to help me. I had nervous spells and frequently had to stop my work and rest.

"So many of my relatives and friends who had used Tanlac kept after me to try it until I got a bottle, and that's when the long lane turned for me. My appetite soon got better and then I began to feel better and commenced to get back my weight and strength. My appetite is wonderful now, everything I eat agrees with me perfectly and I have actually gained seventeen pounds since I began taking Tanlac. My nerves have quieted down until I can sleep just like a child and I'm feeling just fine all the time. I am doing all my work and could do more without any trouble. My husband and mother-in-law are now taking Tanlac, too, with splendid results, and we all think there is no medicine to equal it.
