In the Silent Drama

Strand-In continuing the policy of Manager Watts of the Strand theater to show nothing but pictures par excellence, Charles Ray was presented Sunday in his latest and best, "Playing the Game," a red-blooded tale that plays havoe with human emotions. Charles Ray is fast coming into prominence as one of movieland's most popular stars and "Playing the Game" gives him many an opportunity to increase his standing with picture fans. This picture is again on the program at the Strand today, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The finale comes when Jim rescues her from an abduction which she has planned with a hired man of hers.
As a comedy it is a unique bit of work and has been well staged to bring the best out of the play.

Muse—William Farnum in one of his typical plays of the west "Rough and Ready," will play here today and Tuesday. Farnum is right in his element in depict-ing the character of one of the big hearted men of action of the west, and to lovers of western cowboy plays this will be a treat. In the pay are many of the well known cowboys who have been with Far-num in his previous western plays, making a cast of lesser stars that match well with his work. Farnum and most of his cast are planning to go en massee to a big west-ern Rodeo to be held at San Rodeo, California in July, where many of the picture fans will gather to see them in person
