

POOR OF CITY ARE IN GREAT NEED OF ICE AND COLD MILK

Doctor Tells of Case of Great Distress Where Lack of Causes Much Suffering.

Hedda is a tiny little woman, and since her Carl died she has supported herself and six little ones by day's work and washings. When she came to the door to let the doctor in the other night, after the two hottest days so far this summer, the plump, tow-headed baby was perched on her hip, and the three-year-old twins peered and smiled shyly from behind her skirts. John and Chris and Metta lay on a blanket on the floor between two windows, where they could catch any stray breeze that might happen to blow.

"What's all this?" asked the doctor. "Is the whole family laid up?" "I don't know what it is, but they're awful sick, doctor," said the little woman. "They were taken sick soon after supper and I just had to call you. It must be something they ate."

It was. Ptomaine poisoning was the diagnosis, and it developed that the children had been given a special treat for supper that night—meat, a rare article in Hedda's little home.

"It was cheap, doctor, and I thought the children needed it once in a while, they work so hard. I brought it home with me this morning from the market and took it down cellar, where I thought it would keep cool."

"No ice?" asked the doctor. Hedda smiled. "How could I buy ice?" she asked. "It costs money and you know it is all I can do to keep the babies together and buy food and clothes for them."

It has been a hard year for Hedda since her good man died and no one knows just how hard her struggles have been except the doctor. Many charitably inclined people have offered to help her by taking one or more of the children off her hands, and sometimes Hedda has feared that in justice to the babies she should give them up. She would have probably done so had not the doctor encouraged her to keep them. "I love them just as much as if I had only one," she told him. "If I had a hundred I'd love each one just as well, and I can't bear to give them up."

The doctor understands. He goes as willingly to Hedda's little cottage as he does to the handsome homes a few blocks farther up the street, and he considers himself well paid by the gratitude of the little family—something that is not always forthcoming in cases of the kind, but that never fails in this little home, where the good doctor is the guardian angel.

"We have many cases of such trouble this hot weather," said the doctor. "Food spoils quickly, and these people have no way of keeping it. Those children had been working hard in the hot sun all day, for they are good children and just as determined to keep baby and the twins with them as Hedda is. They need plenty of good, wholesome food, but even if food is brought into the house in a proper condition, they have no means of keeping it that way. Many people think that charity means coal and shoes and warm clothes for the poor in winter. I wish that more of them would remember that milk is a necessity for babies at all times and that ice is the only means most city dwellers have of keeping their food fresh, and ice is hard for them to get."

The Bee is doing a wonderful work among the poor with its milk and ice fund, whereby both milk and ice are supplied to the poor."

Follows Romantic Precedent And is Secretly Married

Following the romantic precedent set by her mother, her grandmother and her great-grandmother, Alice Laurene Burchmore was secretly married to Dr. Glenn H. Fritz, Mrs. 29.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Thomas William Burchmore and is a graduate of Central High school and of Central college, Lexington, Mo. All of her maternal ancestors for three generations back had been married secretly and it was her desire to perpetuate this family sentiment that led to her secret marriage at Council Bluffs, by the Rev. P. M. Bennett.

Slacker Takes His Life; Six Others Under Arrest

Sioux Falls, S. D., June 21.—One man is dead and at least six men who failed to register are in the hands of the police as a result of a "work or fight" raid begun by the home guards here today. In addition, an enemy alien who had not registered was taken in charge.

Melvin Lundy, of Sioux Falls, when asked to show his registration card, said it was in his room a few blocks away. He came staggering in a few minutes later and said he "never had a card and never would." With that he fell over a desk and died 10 minutes later. He had taken a mixture of several kinds of poison.
