TEARS CHANGE TO SMILES AS CUPID PLAYS BIG HAND

Little Mexican Girl to Wed Man Held by Officers; All Trouble Disappears in Offing.

Tears changed to smiles, and the silver lining suddenly appeared through the cloud that had cast its shadow over the hopes of Lucy Alba, pretty 14-year-old Mexican girl, as she sat in the office of Police Captain Vanous, South Side station, Monday afternoon, and listened to an agent of the Department of Justice tell her fiancé, Alfonso Servantes, that he would escape prosecution on a charge of white slavery if he would marry the girl immediately.

Lucy was willing. Alfonso was more than willing. With the consent of the girl's mother, who, with Lucy's brother, came to Omaha last Wednesday to search for her daughter from the home in Kansas City a month ago, why shouldn't he take on a rosy hue?

Lucy wiped a tear from her big black eyes and smiled coyly at her lover, as the pair, accompanied by Lucy's mother and brother, started for the court house to obtain a marriage license.

In the Silent Drama
Rialto—In the "Fall of the Romanoffs" is offered one of the finest of the dramas of the Russian revolution. The play centers about Rasputin, "the black monk" of Russia who was such a power in the palace of the emperor. Illudor, who plays the leading part in the drama, was a close personal friend and confidant of Rasputin and through his efforts the directors of the play have been able to put into the play an amount of local atmosphere that would have been impossible had they not had at hand some one who was familiar with every detail of the life of Rasputin and the life of the czar's household.
