U. P. Advertising Bureau Loses Commodious Quarters

With the government in control of the railroads, advertising departments of the railroads have become of secondary interest. The advertising end of the railroad's once was looked upon as an important factor as a business-getter. Now advertising has been practically all eliminated by order of the government officials.

The Union Pacific advertising department heretofore has occupied extensive quarters on the main floor of the headquarters building, but it is not to do so in the future. From now on what is left of the advertising department will be crowded into a room on the third floor of the building, sharing quarters with the clipping bureau. Frank Roach will continue in charge, but his office force will be cut to one or two clerks.

The rooms now occupied by the advertising department will be turned over to the railroad express company.
