

DOVE OF PEACE CARRIED IN AIR FLIGHT BY YANK

Colonel Joseph Boyle Made 200-Mile Journey in Airplane to Stop Bolshevik-Roumanian War.

Correspondence The Associated Press London, July 5.—An American's flight by airplane 200 miles from Jassy to Odessa was the means of bringing about peace between the bolshevik and the Roumanians last March.

The American "peace dove," as the Roumanians called him after his daring flight, was Col. Joseph Boyle. Colonel Boyle, who was formerly in the Canadian army on the western front, was sent to Russia as the representative of the committee of the American engineers in London and spent several months in Roumania and south Russia. The story of his secret airplane trip is now told for the first time.

Colonel Boyle was one of the few foreigners in Russia who had the confidence and close friendship of the extremist Russian parties from the beginning of the revolutionary period. He was known among the bolsheviks as a man of action, honest and fearless and anxious to extend them a helping hand in every work of reconstruction. On his journeyings around Russia he was never interfered with or challenged. He carried personal letters and credentials from Lenin, Trotsky and a host of lesser leaders and could obtain almost anything he wanted from the local or provincial soviets. He was accompanied everywhere by a staff of three Russian officers who spoke English fluently and who displayed great personal loyalty to Colonel Boyle.

Hostilities Threatened. During the latter part of February the situation between the bolsheviks and Roumanians became very serious. War had even been declared on Roumania by the bolshevik government, owing to misunderstandings about the status of certain Russian troops in Roumania territory and Roumanian troops in Bessarabia. Active hostilities, however, had been generally avoided, and both sides were presumably anxious to reach an amicable understanding.

But communication between Odessa and Jassy was in a state of disorganization which made the telegraph and the mail useless. Every attempt at negotiation between the Roumanians at Jassy and the bolsheviks at Odessa was blocked or brought to naught by intrigues or mischief makers. It began to look as if things were going to drift straight into bloodshed on a large scale.

It was at this point that Colonel Boyle, who had been trying to alleviate the food shortage in Roumania, arranged a meeting of unofficial representatives of both sides on the Roumanian frontier and succeeded in putting through an agreement between these representatives. The Roumanian government was ready to approve the decision of these informal plenipotentiaries, but how was formal confirmation of even favorable consideration, to be obtained from the bolshevik side?

Travel Impossible. The bolshevik "delegates" were without credentials or authority, but they felt if their case were properly put before the authorities in Odessa their course of action would be approved. Travel between Jassy and Odessa had been impossible for several weeks owing to the tearing up of the railway line in Benderi and the wrecking of several bridges and trestles.

Colonel Boyle volunteered to be the bearer of the olive branch, to carry the peace proposals to Odessa with the least possible delay by means of an airplane which he had already persuaded the Roumanian authorities to put at his disposal, and he proposed also to use his own personal influence with the bolshevik leaders in Odessa to secure their approval.

Speedy action was necessary, for it was known that orders had already been given to the bolshevik troops to begin hostilities on a large scale, and it was felt that once serious fighting had begun, the chances of an amicable adjustment would be much diminished.

The necessary papers were hastily prepared and signed, and Colonel Boyle motored to an airfield near Jassy where a Roumanian pilot was waiting. The weather on the day of Colonel Boyle's departure was stormy and threatening and several aviation experts advised him to postpone his journey. He declined to be dissuaded and left Jassy about noon, arriving safely at Odessa shortly before sunset.

The flight was made at a height of about 8,000 feet across a rough mountainous country and in the face of a driving sleet storm. The machine twice developed engine trouble, but this was overcome and a landing was made in an open field not far from the water front at Odessa. By midnight Colonel Boyle had secured the signing of the peace treaty and the cancellation of the orders for a bolshevik offensive against Roumania.

Mexicans Are Raising More Wheat and Less Deviltry

Juarez, Mex., July 5.—"Mexicans in the north are raising less deviltry and more wheat," was the way an American mining man who reached here recently from a tour of the interior of Chihuahua state characterized the conditions in northern Mexico. In the fertile Laguna basin near Torreon, wheat has been planted instead of cotton this year, because of the ravages of the pink boll weevil in that district last year which destroyed the cotton crop.

In the little valleys near Santa Rosalia, Jimenez and Pilar de Concho the native farmers have been harvesting their wheat crops and have found the yield much heavier than in former seasons. Along the Rio Grande and Conchos rivers in the Ojinaga district wheat harvests have been bounteous and the farmers in that district are prosperous. At Jimenez the old Hacienda Delores mill, which was used as a fortress during the revolutions, has been started to grinding grain and the water power mills near Santa Rosalia are again operating after five years of idleness.

U. S. INDIANS DO THEIR SHARE TO HELP WIN THE WAR

Not Surpassed by White Brethren in the Way They Are Assisting Uncle Sam.

The original Americans are in the war to the limit.

Enlisting in the military services and the Red Cross with an enthusiasm unsurpassed by their white brethren and pouring out their treasures freely by subscriptions to the Liberty loans, the Indians are doing their share with a fine courage which gives one more illustration of the incapacity of the German mind for computing the bond between races when engaged in a fight for freedom. Subscriptions by Indians to the Liberty loans have totaled nearly $13,000,000, according to figures compiled by Cato Sells, commissioner of Indian affairs. That is a subscription of about $40 for all Indians in the United States. Adults and minors have been about equally represented among the subscribers.

Over 5,000 in Service. The number of Indians in the military services probably is more than 5,000. Mr. Sells is having prepared a complete record of their participation in the great war. About 2,200 of the total have been indexed and classified, showing 1,800 in the army, 300 in the navy and 100 in other military work. Their willingness to bear their share of the hardships and dangers of military life is evidenced by the fact that 1,600 of those classified volunteered for service, while 600 were drafted—probably a greater percentage of volunteers than can be shown by any other of the numerous races represented in the United States.

As a soldier the Indian makes good with a rush. Indian schools, with an attendance of 30,000 annually, have military drill, almost without exception, and to preliminary training in military life, the young Indian soldier adds traditionally fine physique. One Indian school has a service flag with 150 stars, all but 15 representing volunteer enlistments. Another school has a flag with 175 stars.

Descended from Warriors. While the young braves are overseas fighting an enemy whose cruelty is more refined and deadly than the uncivilized Indians ever practiced, the grizzled old warriors of other days, men who remember when the American west was only emerging from a wilderness and the white man was still regarded as a foe, remain on the reservations, smoking the pipe of peace with their white neighbors and preaching the doctrine of patriotism to their people. Sons and grandsons of Chiefs John Grass, Joseph, John Gall and other Indian leaders are in the United States army.

Indian women, likewise, are doing their share by aiding in Red Cross work. Although a complete vocational course of four years in nursing is of comparative recent introduction in the larger schools in the reservations, six young women have been accepted for hospital service abroad and others are being prepared for similar work. Indian school papers carry attractive advertisements for the Red Cross. One reservation boasts of a Red Cross banner in every home. Saturday afternoons are devoted by the women to sewing for army hospitals and the boys give up their holidays to gathering sphagnum moss in the bogs and marshes for use in surgical pads and ambulance pillows.

Separate units for Indians have not been organized by the army because of the desire to have them rub elbows with fellow citizens and become better acquainted. "Wonderful and spontaneous fidelity to the highest welfare of the nation," is the way Commissioner Sells describes the response of the Indian to his country's need.

"I hail this growing manifestation in Indian life as a sure basis for the strong and trustworthy citizenship to which our efforts are directed."

American Troops Loath to Accept British Tea Habit

Headquarters American Troops with the British Army in France, July 5.—American boys billeted in northern France before being brigaded with the British troops at the front are accepting the new conditions philosophically and adapting themselves readily, with the exception of the use of tea as a substitute for coffee with breakfast. They found this change too violent.

For military reasons it appeared necessary that the Americans brigaded with the British be served the British ration. They will be allowed to acquire the tea habit gradually, however, if they want to, coffee being served with breakfast, as usual.

With the coffee they will get bread and jam regularly, sausage sometimes and bacon now and then. Their dinner at 12:30 will consist of meat, bread, cheese, pudding and potatoes, varied with other vegetables when they are obtainable. The evening meal at about 5 o'clock comprises bread and butter, jam with tea and extras occasionally.

The rations are good and abundant and when the American boy gets accustomed to them he thrives on them.
