General Murguia Denies

German Propaganda Is Permitted in Mexico
Juarez, Mex., July 7.—Gen. Francisco Murguia, commander of the northern military zone, denied that German war propaganda was being permitted to violate Mexico's neutrality, in a statement given to the Associated Press here.
"There is nothing to these reports of unusual activities among the few German refugees in northern Mexico," General Murguia said. "Neither are they being permitted to conduct a campaign of propaganda in the north."
General Murguia said Villa and his band of 30 followers had been driven into the Durango foothills and were no longer a factor in the north.
He said a "tor of Mexico" by a delegation of American editors would do much to reveal the true conditions.

"Dreamland Adventures"

By Daddy—The Beautiful Stranger A complete, new adventure each week, beginning Monday and ending Saturday.

CHAPTER I.
Land Where the Sun Plays.
In a previous adventure Peggy went to Dreamland, where she planned the kidnapping of the King of the Woods by the King of the Wild Geese and his army. The King at that time gave her a pressing invitation to visit him in the far Northland.

"O SUN, you are so beautiful I wish you would stay with us the whole night through," murmured Peggy, leaning back in her porch swing and looking dreamily out over the lake where the glowing orb of day was slowly sinking.

"Swish! Something landed on the rail beside her!" Peggy jumped upright. The something was an excited young Gander, a soldier of the army of the King of the Wild Geese. In his beak he carried a wild flower.

"Come quickly to the land where the Sun is awake all night," he honked, dropping the flower in her hand. "The King of the Wild Geese has been secret to tell you, Princess Peggy, and sends you his Snow Drop from Santa Claus land to bring you to him. Eat it, and you will find it even more powerful than grass from a fairy ring."

"Oh, but it's getting dark," cried Peggy.

"Mount your airplane and hasten," insisted the Gander. "If we don't let the Sun get away from us we can keep in the light until we reach the Day-all-night kingdom."

Peggy hesitated, then cautiously hit the head of the Snow Drop. Presto! Again she was transformed into a humming, powerful flier, which carried her into the air so fast the Gander had to chase desperately to catch her. Up higher, she found that the Sun, instead of sinking, seemed to be rising.

"Why, the Sun's coming up again," she cried in surprise.

"No, we've traveled on the wings of magic to the far Northland," honked the Gander. "Here at the top of the earth the Sun plays in summer. He doesn't set at night, but swings around and around in a circle like a merry-go-round. He has so much fun he can't take time to sleep, but pops into bed and pops right out again."

Sure enough, instead of getting darker and darker as at home, it was getting lighter and lighter and the Sun was swinging higher and higher in the sky. Peggy was so fascinated by this queer sight that she was surprised when the Gander suddenly honked:

"Here we are, Dive!"

tan and smiled ruefully. "Oh, we are good, all right, Shorty," he replied through clenched teeth.

The bullets kept coming in waves, but the American did not dodge again.

On they went down the shell-torn slope through barbed wire that tore their legs cruelly at times. Then came the first German trench defense in a runway where several gray coats were firing with rifles at the advancing troops.

"Hit them, Yank, at it!" yelled the Australian, and he hurled himself over the parapet.

The Yankee was down among the Germans like a whirlwind, and then there began a furious lunging and parrying with the bayonets. There were four Germans in that pit, great strapping fellows, with plenty of fight in them. The American was in a battle rage and he fought furiously, but with the same headwork that characterized his veteran comrade's methods. It was all over in a moment and the enemy lay crumpled in the ditch.

The American had accounted for two of them; he had held his own.

"Good fellow, Yank, you certainly can fight," the Australian said. "But hell, man, don't never stab another boche through the chest. You'll bust your steel and there'll be the devil to pay. Get 'em in the throat."

Silences Rapid Firer.
Just a little distance ahead was a machine gun nest and a bullet from that direction grazed the American's cheek. He answered him. He deliberately charged the nest and hurled a bomb among the gray coats. Another and still another hand grenade went spinning into the midst of the enemy with the precision of a base ball thrown by an expert. Little spouts of earth shot up and the rapid firer was silenced.

Two Germans appeared from the nearby cover with their hands held high. "Kamerad," they cried.

The American whirled and fixed his bayonet.

"No, Yank, no," the Australian shouted. "The blighters are trying to surrender. Let 'em alone. We will turn 'em over to be sent back. Pretty creatures, ain't they, these cussed sausage eaters?"

So the allied pair continued their adventurous journey and the story of the early moments of their fighting was the same as that at the end.

"This is where we rest," the Australian asserted as he wiped the sweat from his brow and leaned against the breastwork.

"But why," the American demanded, "don't we continue? We could get ahead easily now. We've got the boche on the run."

"I know, Yank, so we could," the Australian replied as he stared speculatively toward the east, "but Haig told me, personally, yesterday that he wanted me to stay right here. Me and Haig had quite a talk about it and his idea was that if we went any further we might catch the Spanish influenza that the boches have got. So we better linger here for a while, I reckon."

"All right," the Yankee said, disappointedly.

Berkeley, Cal., July 7.—Charles M. Schwab, director general of the Emergency Fleet corporation, speaking today at an inspirational mass meeting held by delegates to the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, reiterated his belief that the record record of delivery from American shipyards of the equivalent of one 10,000-ton ship a day would be doubled in the near future.

McAdoo Regains Health.
Washington, July 7.—Secretary McAdoo, who went to California several weeks ago, after an attack of throat trouble, advised railroad administration officials here today that he has entirely regained his health and has been making a tour of inspection of railroad lines and terminals on the Pacific coast, with a view to recommending betterments in service.

GAIN IN U-BOATS IS REPORTED BY HUN NAVY LEADER

Vice Admiral von Capelle Tells Reichstag Estimates of Losses Have Been Exaggerated by Allies.
Amsterdam, July 7.—Submarines are increasing in number and quality, according to Vice Admiral von Capelle, in the debate in the reichstag. He said reports of losses have been exaggerated by the allies.
Von Capelle's statement came in response to a reference to a report of the French under-secretary that two-thirds of the U-boats had been sunk while twice the number which Germany is able to build also are being destroyed.
"These figures are incorrect," said Admiral von Capelle, "as is also the recent statement by the British minister of marine that since January last, the number sunk exceeded construction. The facts are quite the reverse. All reports about U-boat losses spread by the enemy are exaggerated. As far as the number and quality of our U-boats are concerned our weapon is increasing in strength."
"Many of you gentlemen recently attended a lecture by one of our submarine commanders who had just returned from the barred zone. He described in detail all the defensive measures which our enemies employ against the U-boat. His utterances showed that our splendid U-boat crews have stood their ground hither to against all these measures, and I have every reason to believe they will continue to do so in the future."
"Official publications by the admiralty staff are the most reliable bases for judging the military results of the submarine war. If now, about 18,000,000 tons which were at the disposal of the enemy already have been destroyed, the sinking of an average of five big vessels is still reported daily, this is a guarantee that the efficacy of the submarine war remains unaltered."
Von Capelle cited the statement by Vice Admiral Sims that the ascending curve of construction would soon cut the descending curve of submarine sinking so that the allied powers would be fully able to replace their losses.
"Almost simultaneously," he continued, "Edward A. Filene, president of the shipping committee of the United States chamber of commerce, said: 'Springs of 1917 have arrived before our curve of shipping construction cuts the curve of U-boat sinkings. All statements published in newspapers about a decrease in sinkings are based on hopes and dreams. This sounds quite different, although Filene, as an American, certainly would not say too little. I hope that next spring, if the war continues then, that his hopes will prove to be incorrect.'"

Doctors Marvel at Grit Of American Wounded

The medical folk salute the wounded from the fighting around Chateau Thierry, says the Stars and Stripes, official paper of the American forces in France. From the youngest litter boy to the senior surgeon, from the rudest of the field dressing stations to the finest operating room in Paris, the testimony is overwhelming to this effect—that they have never seen such grit in all their lives, never seen such unquenchable spirit.

Pair Also Accused, According to Report, of Revealing to Italians Plans of Recent Battle.

London, July 7.—No light has yet been shed on the mysterious rumors concerning Emperor Charles and Empress Zita, of Austria, which Dr. von Seydler, the premier, recently found necessary to deny when his attention was called to them by a group of Austrian deputies. The premier denounced "these base and absolutely senseless tales" and declared that any one caught spreading the rumors would be punished severely.
