M'KELVIE FLAYS NONPARTISANS IN OMAHA SPEECH

(Continued From Page One.) and under the impulse of a mutual realization of the need of harmony and the triumph of republican principles, had grasped hands and forgotten their personal differences in their patriotic desire to bring about party harmony.

Example of T. R. and Taft. The example of Taft and Roosevelt should be an inspiration for all republicans to forget faction, lay down past differences and work for the success of the party. "While now is the time, primarily, to work for the success of the war, and while no republican would do one thing to impede the progress of the war, it is a time for patriotic partisanship, the kind that, when the campaign is over, the leaders will feel that they shall have made a splendid contribution to forwarding the ideals of their government, whether they win the campaign or not," said Mr. McKelvie.

"This has been the first war in which the country has participated in which the republican party has not been in control. He contrasted the action of the republican party during the civil and Spanish-American wars, when it invited its opponents to go on with their partisanship, where it did not interfere with the progress of the wars, and he called attention to the opposition made by the democratic party to the war policies of Lincoln and McKinley, and contrasted it with the wholehearted support the president is receiving from republicans today in their effort to help the commander-in-chief of the army and navy in winning the war.

Boone, Ia., June 22, 1918. Nebraska Buick Auto Co., Lincoln, Neb. Gentlemen: It is with pleasure that I write you in regard to the GMC-Samson Tractor. For two years I have been looking for a farm tractor and have looked at a good many makes, but the more I looked the more disgusted I got at what they called farm tractors until I saw the GMC-Samson. The first glance at it appealed to me, but at that I had a big surprise coming when we really put it to work.

A GMC-Samson will bear the brunt of your work during the busy season. It is not merely a "plow tractor," but a "Jack-of-all-trades." After you finish your plowing it will go right on the ground and do your discing, dragging and planting without injury to the ground.

Constructive Policies

"The republican party in the past, as it is today, is the party of foresight, vision and constructive policies. It has fostered every opportunity which has created this into the great nation we have today. "It had in its leadership men who could see the inevitableness of this country entering the war when Belgium was invaded, and who had the courage to plead for preparedness. At the same time democratic opportunists were advocating that this country keep out of the war. Even before the sinking of the Lusitania, this government was in possession of facts which showed the influence of German propaganda and German violations of neutrality which would make the entry of this country into the war an absolute certainty, yet the campaign waged by democrats was one to which they cannot, in future years, point to with pride.
