Roy A. Neely Asks Quotation Charging Extravagance and Improper Company on Part of Wife

For two and one-half years Roy A. Neely tried to beat the high cost of living. He formed a life partnership with the present Mrs. Margaret E. Neely. But the partnership has reached the point of dissolution and the fight against the aerial flight of living expenses has ended in utter defeat with Neely's petition for divorce.

Mrs. Neely is a bad cook, Neely found out soon after their marriage in December, 1915, says Neely. Nevertheless, he always turned over his paycheck every Saturday night to pay the household expenses. Still large bills kept coming in from the grocery stores and the meat shops and the clothing stores, which Neely had to dig down in order to meet.

So Neely next tried the plan of giving his wife $10 every week to pay the living expenses for her, himself and their infant child, Lucile. But this plan also was a complete failure, because bills for charges still kept on coming from the shops, he states.

But Mrs. Neely got tired of his company, he says, and told him that since he wasn't proving a success at providing for his family, he had better enlist in the army. So Neely gladly acquiesced. Then, he says in his petition for divorce, "she manifested great joy at his attempt to enlist." But, fortunately or unfortunately, Neely was rejected by the army, and still has all of his troubles on his hands.

AT THE THEATERS

"The Unmarried Mother." Built around a theme as old as humanity, "The Unmarried Mother" offers little that is new, either in thought or treatment, nor does its unfolding present a remedy. A girl has been deceived, suffers goes to the very bottom in misery, and is suddenly snatched away from all her sorrows by a man who discovers at first glance that she is the ideal for whom he has waited. And after a certain amount of expiatory travel in the course of which all mystery is cleared up, they live happily ever after. It has about as much to do with "war babies" as with "Way Down East" or "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model."

Bill at the Empress.

"The Four Seasons," a quartet of attractive singing and dancing girls, is the headline feature on the Empress vaudeville program for the first half of the week. The offering is novel in many respects and is wholly entertaining. Sparkling solo and harmony singing is a big feature of the act. The Jack Arnold trio have a comedy singing, talking and piano offering that met with much success with Sunday's audiences. Wright and Walker, singers and dancers, and Roseand Dell, presenting a clever comedy skit, complete the vaudeville bill. Virginia Pearson in "Her Price," a gripping story of a woman who bartered her beauty for a career, is the feature on the photoplay program.

In the Silent Drama

"Muss-Frank Keenan will be shown for the last time today in "More Trouble," a farce-comedy with the unexpected comedy in the climax and a finished bit of work by the star. Director Ward can handle the picture. In addition, Keenan can handle himself—result—a great picture, smooth-running action, snappy comedy and cleverly written sub-titles. A news weekly and comedy complete the bill.

Sun—"The Golden Wall," a story of a poverty-stricken marquis and a millionaire's daughter, whose wealth bars him from her love will be shown here today for the last time with Carole Blackwell and Greedy in the leading roles.

The marquis of Amber comes to America, seeking the family jewels to get here, and becomes superintendent of the estate of a millionaire, whose daughter, Marion, suspects him of being a fortune hunter. He is too good looking to be a mere superintendent. It is an interesting love story and with several tense climaxes, ending in a quarrel between the two young people as he declares that he will never marry her until he is rich as she of all she is poor as he. Another actor brings humor into the situation as he falls into the water in pursuit of his lady's handkerchief. It is caught kissing the governess through a lighted window, and in the finale the marquis becomes rich through an oil speculation while the heroine is just as rich as she is poor in order to have him by being out of her father's will.

Leathro—Mabel Normand in one of the greatest patriotic plays of the war, "Jean of Pitcairng," will be here today. It is a stirring story of the modern war times in America and in which Miss Normand has appeared at her best. The play was shown in Washington before Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and a number of army, navy and war officials. It is a masterpiece of dramatic art, and was complimented very highly by the first lady of the land on her work in the picture. In addition to the big feature of the day there also will be shown "Fatty Arbuckle in 'A Barnyard Romeo.'"

RED CROSS AIDED BY NEWSIE FROLIC AT LAKE MANAWA

Old Timers Join With Present Day Venders in Making Merry On Bastille Day

The combined efforts of Madame E. Guerin, French woman touring the country in behalf of the French war orphans, of Mogy Bernstein and his Red Cross vaudeville troupe, of "Joe the Glazier," fancy high diver, of Charley Black, Rome Miller and of a half dozen Omaha Red Cross workers, made the annual newsboys' outing at Manawa park, Sunday afternoon and evening, a success both for the newsboys and the war charities.

Complete returns of the money raised among the large crowd by the Red Cross women could not be tabulated last night, and the exact amount will not be announced until today. The newsboys had the time of their lives. Guests of honor they were, and everyone on the committee, headed by Charley Black and Rome Miller, and all of the two dozen Omaha society women under the direction of Mrs. Charley Black, Mrs. Will Herdman and Mrs. Guy L. Smith, worked from long before the newsies reached the park until long after they had left, seeing that the hungry crowd of newspaper venders got enough to eat.

A sumptuous feast of fried chicken, mashed potatoes, watermelon, lemonade and hosts of other dainties was awaiting the 800 newsboys when they reached the park on special cars at 2 o'clock. The board was quickly cleared, and then the exciting watermelon eating contest, the pie eating contest, the feature races, took up a large part of the afternoon. In between the contests Mogy Bernstein's vaudeville troupe gave

Mrs. Alice Strausser Charges Husband Threatened to Shoot Locking her in a room, threatening her with personal violence by flourishing a revolver in her face and threatening to kill her, constitutes incompatibility of temperament, thinks Mrs. Alice M. They were married last February. She wants her maiden name restored which was Alice M. McCormick.

Valley Druggists Estopped From Collecting Insurance

Because the Royal Insurance company, Limited, has its headquarters in London, England, over 4,000 miles away, it is no reason why it should lose money, thinks County Attorney Magney. So he has filed an information against Charles Ackers and Frank L. Luce, druggists at Valley, Neb., who, the county attorney charges, attempted to collect on their policy of $4,000 on their store which was destroyed by fire under suspicious circumstances June 20.
