Farewell Reception Given South Side Men at Stock Exchange Before En- training.

The South Side sent 112 Kaiserlickers to Uncle Sam's national army Monday morning. Accompanied by friends, sweethearts and mothers, the young men gathered at the South Side city hall early and awaited roll call. After answering to their names and receiving instructions from J. J. Breen, chairman of exemption board No. 2, they marched to the stock yards, where they were guests of the Stock Yards Exchange at a send-off luncheon at 10:30. At 11 o'clock they joined the draftees from Greater Omaha.

"Don't leave South Side owing any bills," cautioned Chairman Breen. "Don't take much money with you; you won't need it. Go buy war stamps with it at any of the banks. And, boys, don't forget to come back to the South Side. Don't meet some little French girl and stay over there when the war is over."

Eight registrants at the South Side have waived deferred classification and have signified their willingness to attend the University of Nebraska and take one of the special war courses offered for mechanics and telegraphers.

A bevy of South Side girls were on hand to pin the ribbons on the blushing and smiling young men representing many races and classes.

Armour's Comfort Club Will Hold Dance Saturday

Armour's Soldiers and Sailors Comfort club will hold a social and dance in the new office building Saturday night, August 2. About 65 of the women employees of the Armour plant belong to the club. The young women send kits and little luxuries to the 275 men who have gone from the plant into the service. Money collected at the dance will be used to further this work. Although the ticket sale has been limited to $1,000, it is likely that many more than this number of tickets will be bought, judging from the present demand. Desks and office furniture in the main office on the second floor will be moved to one side and the floor waxed for dancing.

South Side Opposes Change In Telephone Zones System

Joseph Koutsky, South Side business man, convinced the city council committee of the whole that any change in the telephone zone and rate system existing between the two Omahas would not be in the best interests of South Side, who are not complaining of conditions.

"We are satisfied and you have not received any complaints except from Commissioner Towl," Mr. Koutsky stated.

A resolution on the subject was placed on file.

Yards Cowboys Will Enter Frontier Day Contests

Omaha will be represented at the Frontier Days celebration this week at Cheyenne, Wyo., by 18 riders from the South Side stock yards. They will leave Wednesday and return Sunday night. Two street parades, rope throwing contests, broncho riding and auto races are some of the things planned for the visitors, who will come from all parts of the west for the annual celebration.

Alleged Draft Evader Will Be Inducted Into Army

Thomas Brodis, negro, arrested for vagrancy, is being held by the south side police for evading the draft. Brodis claims that he has been out of the city. Police Judge Madden sympathized with his yearning for travel and assured him that he would be given a nice suit of khaki clothes, a shiny gun and a ticket that would enable him to join the 112 other south side men who left for Camp Dodge Monday morning.

Autoist Fined $50 When Machine Hits Children

Frank Coast, thirty-second and R streets, was fined $50 and costs in police court Monday morning for reckless driving and injuring Mary Meehan, 5305 South Thirty-second street. Coast claims that his clutch had recently been repaired and that he was trying it out when it failed to work and ran into a group of children playing on the walk. The child received no severe injuries.

Frank Madura, recruiting agent for the Polish-French army, has given 200 more of his books to Poles in the French army. The books are printed in the Polish language and have been sent via the French military commission in New York. Madura has donated many books to the South Side library for boys in the American army. About one-third of his large library has been given in this cause.

City Employes to Be Paid Twice a Month, To Encourage Thrift

HOSPITAL HEAD WANTS WAR AID FOR DISCIPLINE

Army Appropriation Will End Legal Squabbles in Deten- tion Home, Dr. Palmer Findley Tells Court.

Hope that an amendment to the army appropriation bill passed by congress on July 6 and providing $2,400,000 for the detention and cure of fallen women will iron out the legal difficulties surrounding the detention of diseased women in the city detention home, Twenty-second street and St. Mary's avenue, is being entertained by Omaha physicians and social workers interested in the work.

Dr. Palmer Findley, medical director of the city detention home, under authority of the city department of health, said Monday, after he had testified in habeas corpus proceedings brought by John M. McFarland, attorney for the release of Mrs. Carmen Lynne, inmate in the home, "As soon as this appropriation is made available we shall be on a war basis and shall avoid all these legal squabbles."

Judge W. A. Redick took under advisement the case of Mrs. Carmen Lynne.

No Clinical Work.

Mrs. Lynne testified that she had been arrested as a vagrant at Sixteenth and Cass streets one evening last week as she was on her way to a restaurant. She rooms at the Park hotel, she testified, and her husband is now in an army training camp at Allentown, Pa.

Reports that patients at the detention home were subjected to ex-amination before groups of medical students were flatly contradicted by Dr. Findley, who also said that only he, himself, two other physicians and two medical students were present at the examination of the Lynne woman.

"Our function is not to cure these women absolutely," testified Dr. Findley, "for in many cases that would take a lifetime. Our function is to render them incapable of transmitting any social disease."

Works Without Pay.

Dr. Findley said that his services in directing the detention home were given without pay as part of his contribution to war work and that he was paying the salary of Miss Alta Berger, head nurse at the home, until the institution was put on a definite basis and other appropriations were made available.

Objections of some of the inmates that they were forced to do household work without their consent and so were put under involuntary servitude, were answered by Dr. Findley's statement that it was absolutely necessary to give the women something to do to occupy their time. "Personally I have never seen a hospital kept cleaner nor better managed from a medical standpoint than this home," he said.

The army bill appropriation provides $1,000,000 for detention purposes, $1,000,000 for state boards of health, $100,000 for medical school researches and $300,000 for researches by scientific bodies. It was made necessary by the great amount of disease of a social character found among men entering the National army.

Probe Barber's Arrest.

Chief of Police M. F. Dempsey Monday ordered an investigation of the reason and persons responsible for holding Ed Barber, 4909 1/2 South Twenty-fifth street, in the central police station last Friday night. It is alleged Barber, who is 49 years of age, was arrested while attending a patriotic celebration at the court house for being drunk, while he was suffering from paralysis and that he was kept in jail without medical attention until morning. He was discharged in police court Saturday.

COUNTESS FROM FRANCE SPEAKS FOR WAR FUNDS

Countess Madeleine de Bryas Addresses Chamber of Com- merce in Support of Com- mittee for France.

The beautiful Countess Madeleine de Bryas spoke at the Chamber of Commerce Monday noon before a large audience that cheered her eloquence as she spoke of her native land.

The countess is a blonde with golden hair, fine coloring and perfect features. Her blue gown has the mark of the Parisian maker. She was elegantly gowned in true Parisian good taste and elegance.

She was born in Paris and her home is in the house where she was born on the Champs Elysees. Her father is Count de Bryas and her mother was Miss Clymer of Philadelphia.

The countess is the organizer and head of the largest work in France for taking care of people from the invaded regions. It is called "Le Bon Gite" or "The Good Home." Two years ago she began lecturing in southern France and in Spain to gather funds for this work. When she was asked to come to this country in the interest of Miss Anne Morgan's American committee for devastated France she left her own work in the hands of Miss Morgan's committee.

Lived Near Lines.

For months the countess has lived in a little hut near the front lines, where Miss Morgan and other workers were also living. Sometimes it was so cold they could not sleep.

that is characteristic of the French makes it almost impossible to get the people away from their homes until they are actually being invaded by the enemy," said the countess. "Then when the flight can no longer be delayed there is such confusion that many children are lost. They are too small to know where they live. They grow and change and in many cases can never be reunited to their families. In this last drive 1,000 children were brought to us by mothers who left them in our care. The government has given us a farm where we keep them in comfort.

"There has been no real reconstruction work yet. It would not be wise because in case of another invasion reconstructed houses would merely fall again to the destructive impulses of the Germans. French soldiers, in their seven days' rest from the trenches, are employed in patching up homes and the families come back as quick as possible and in spite of bursting shells to the homes that they love even in desolation. The government also provides wooden sheds which will be useful after the war as cattle sheds and, in case of a second invasion, their destruction is not a great loss.

American Girls Work.

"In the last drive the American girls did wonderful things in evacuating the populations. They can drive motors while our own girls can not do that. Of course, there are no private motors in France now because all are commandeered for the military and besides we cannot get gasoline for private use.

"France today is one vast refuge for French, Belgian, Serbian, Montenegrin and other people. One-fifth of its area has been overrun by the enemy and the destruction is complete. They do not satisfy themselves with destroying one house but destroy them all. We just received sad word of my father's splendid chateau in the Compeigne. It is totally destroyed in the second advance of the Germans. In their first advance they used it as a hospital but this time they destroyed it entirely. It was so beautiful, set on an island with water right up to the walls. We used to fish from the windows.

"The morale of the French is unshaken and it cannot be shaken. I remember spending one night in a cellar while a terrible air raid of Paris was going on. We joked all night."

She is accompanied by her sister, Mlle. de Bryas. They will remain in Omaha until Wednesday. The countess expects to organize a committee here to perpetuate the work of securing funds for the committee for devastated France.
