Paxton & Gallagher to Hold Picnic for Employees

A thousand people just bound and determined to have a real, big time, ought to make "some picnic." There have been 992 acceptances of the invitation of Paxton & Gallagher company to the picnic at Krug Park Tuesday night, July 30, and more to come.

The invitation was extended to employees and their families. Special cars will carry the employees, leaving the office at 4:15. Members of the families may go on any car, on tickets furnished by the company. For admission to the cars every one will be furnished with a special button.

A short program has been arranged, including a lot of the old standbys. Here they are: egg race, boys and girls; wheelbarrow race, strictly for gentlemen; nail driving contest, no gentlemen admitted; thread, needle and tie race, for any sex; spar and "I-low fight, ladies' ball throwing contest, three-legged race for men.

For these contests a number of valuable prizes will be offered, such as thermos bottles, electric irons, manicure sets, wrist watches, etc.

Policeman Injured. Police Officer Elmer McMichael suffered what may prove to be a fracture of the leg when he was struck by an automobile driven by Richard Perry, Fairacres, Saturday evening. The accident occurred in Happy Hollow boulevard. Perry stopped his car and took McMichael to the Swedish Mission hospital. McMichael lives at 3822 North Fortieth avenue, Omaha, Neb.

"Dreamland Adventures"

By Daddy—THE STOLEN BRIDE. A complete, new adventure each week. Beginning Monday and ending Saturday.

(In previous adventures Peggy has been made Princess of Birdland and has met many interesting characters among the Birds and Animals, the latter including Rocky Star, the army mule, and Bill Goat and Johnny Bull, mascots of the soldiers.)

CHAPTER I. The Wedding Invitation.

"BOOM! BOOM!" tolled the big bell of the city hall clock. The sound carrying far through the silence of the night caused Peggy to open her eyes wide in sleepy surprise.

"Only 2 o'clock she murmured. 'That's strange. It's as light as day. I wonder if that clock is slow?'

"Who! Who!" came a call outside her window.

"The clock," answered Peggy, sitting up. "I am wondering if the clock is slow."

"Who! Who!" came the call again. Peggy realized that it wasn't a question at all. It was the hoot of an Owl.

"Oh, I hope it's a messenger from Birdland," she cried, hopping out of bed in a hurry.

On the roof of the porch was a young Brownie Owl.

"Good night, Princess Peggy," he said.

"Good day," corrected Peggy. Then she remembered that it wasn't day, so she changed her greeting, though it did sound very queer. "Good night, Brownie Owl."

"I have a message for you from Judge Owl," hooted Brownie Owl. "It's a wedding invitation."

A wedding! Peggy was delighted. She'd never received a really, truly wedding invitation of her own. She took the rolled-up lily pad which Brownie Owl held out to her and read eagerly what Judge Owl had written thereon:

"Fair Princess Peggy, come to the wedding. At break of day, down by the bay, I'll marry Miss Purple Swallow."

Peggy felt a sharp pang of disappointment.

"I don't think that's right," she cried. "Judge Owl is old enough to be Miss Purple Swallow's grandfather. She'd ought to marry General Swallow, who loves her with all his heart."

charming young bird as Miss Purple Swallow to wed the old Judge, no matter how nice he might be.

"Where is the beautiful bride?" asked Peggy.

General Swallow looked anxious. "She's late," he replied. "She is coming with her father and ought to be here now." He looked up into the sky and so did all the other Birds.

"There she comes! There she comes!" cried General Swallow, as a black speck darted toward them. "No, it isn't," he quickly contradicted himself. "It's Purple Swallow, her father. Where can she be?"

Purple Swallow was shrieking loudly as he came.

"To the rescue! To the rescue! The bride has been stolen by Blue Jay and his Gang."

(Tomorrow will be described the pursuit of rascally Blue Jay and the stolen bride.)
