Rains and Breaking of Hot Spell Send Corn Rains and Breaking of Hot Spell Send Corn Prices Down.

Chicago, July 29.—Welcome rains and the breaking up of the hot wave in the southwest had a decided bearish effect today on corn. Largely as a result, prices, although steady at the close, were 2% 62% o net lower, with August $1.52% and September $1.53% $1.54. Oats finished 1@1%0 down in provisions, the outcome ranged from 20c decline to 22c advance.

Corn traders devoted chief attention to the fact that moisture had been supplied to every state in the belt, and that the amount exceeded a full inch at many places Furthermore, instead of temperatures that reached as high as 108, the mercury as far south as the lower boundaries of Kansas and Missouri had dropped down to seasonable figures. Cheering war news and continued Otheral receipts added to the force of bear ish sentiment. Besides, it was said that the crop this senson was now three weeks nearer to maturity than was the case a year ago. In view, size of an increase of the visible supply, railies were of short duration.

Hog market strength lifted provisions, but subsequently was more or less offset by the weakness of grain,
