Society Leaders Wage War on Game of Bridge

Bridge must go. It is a wartime edict.

A solemn protest against the game of bridge and a campaign for its extinction has been started by prominent eastern society women.

"We condemn the playing of bridge in times of war, as a contemptible waste of time, an evil example to set and a form of idleness unworthy of our place as American citizens."

"We believe that by playing bridge, men and women of wealth and leisure give to the exponents of class hatred a weapon to wield against the unity of the United States and its long cherished institutions."

"Therefore, we sign this appeal to players of bridge who may not have considered the widespread influence of their apathy toward the common weal, to forswear the playing of bridge until the end of the war and to persuade others to cease this time-killing, useless pastime."

Omaha women patriots did not need the east to set them an example of giving up all idle diversions.

WOMEN IN WAR TIME

Appeal for Rooms.

There is need of desirable quarters for wives of soldiers. The War Camp Community Service is trying to arrange for this need and will appreciate it if people having furnished rooms available for light housekeeping or otherwise will send word to the War Camp Community Service at 508 Omaha National Bank Bldg., giving full information.

These rooms must be in the vicinity of Fort Omaha or Florence Field. Ordinarily the soldiers are here several months and some of them are more or less permanently located here.

A high school alumnae club will be organized Saturday afternoon at Camp Brewster when the Student Club from which leaders for the Brewster at 2 o'clock. "Dreamland Adventures"

By Daddy—THE MIGHTY WHIZ ARMY. A complete, new adventure each week beginning Monday and ending Saturday.

CHAPTER VI The Fate of the Submarine. THE German submarine apparently had come up just for a peek at the approaching transports, for the periscope at once sank out of sight again. Lieutenant Young circled back to a point above where the periscope had vanished, but the rising sun cast such a shimmer of light upon the water that nothing could be seen beneath the surface. Peggy, looking eagerly down, could see only a mirror-like sparkle. On came the foremost troopship, its decks crowded with soldiers out enjoying the morning breeze. The seaplane was so large that it could not turn quickly. Neither could it hover over any one point to make a careful search. It had to fly back and forth. The U-boat had every chance to get away before it was found. Peggy thought of a way to help. "General Swallow, find that submarine!" she commanded. Peggy looked down. There was the submarine, as plain as could be, only a few feet beneath the surface. Eyes as sharp as those of Peggy had seen it. The alert young ensign was ready to act. He pressed the trigger and a bomb shot downward directly at General Swallow. Peggy gave a gasp of dismay and shut her eyes. When she opened them General Swallow had disappeared. There came a muffled roar from behind and Peggy turned to see a mass of water shoot into the air. "Poor, poor General Swallow!" she cried. "It hit! It hit!" shrieked an exulting voice close beside her. It was General Swallow, half mad with enthusiastic excitement. He had dodged the bomb, and it had gone straight to its mark. Out of the boiling waters the deck of the submarine suddenly came to view. Lieutenant Young headed the seaplane back toward it. A door in the U-boat's conning tower flew open and out popped a sailor, followed quickly by another and another. They plunged immediately into the sea. Ensign Ward was ready to drop another and finishing bomb, but mercifully stayed his hand. It could be seen that the submarine was a smashed and battered hulk, and that the crew was trying to escape before it sank. Man after man climbed out of the conning tower and jumped into the water. They hadn't a moment to lose, for as the last one came up the submarine slid beneath the surface never to rise again. Peggy watched the German sailors struggling for their lives. Her heart was alive with pity for them, even though she knew they had probably sent many innocent persons to their deaths. She was glad that the young ensign had been merciful, when it had been within his power to launch the second bomb and kill every one of them. She wondered if the Germans could swim until rescue came. But she did not need to have any fears on that score, for almost immediately an American destroyer came tearing up. At once it set about picking up the submarine's crew. As the transports passed by in safety there was a terrific cheering, the soldiers paying prompt homage to the victorious seaplane. Peggy had almost forgotten General Thrift in the excitement. He was beaming with joy. "That, too, was done by the Whizzes," he cried, "for they made the bombs as well as the seaplane. But this is only a small part of the tremendous work they are doing." "Oh, I'm glad I've seen it," cried Peggy. "I'm going to save every cent I get and add as many soldiers as I can to your army." (In her next adventure Peggy goes to a bird party and meets a handsome bear.) Hundreds of mothers in Sioux Falls, S. D., have petitioned the school board to regulate the attire of high school girls with a view to curbing extravagance in dress during wartime.

Puritan Hams. "Is it young?" is the natural inquiry of a woman buying fowls. That quality is just as desirable in a ham. Those tender, juicy meat fibres are not found in meats which are more than mature. Puritan Hams are "young" as evidenced by the thin, smooth skin. Such hams more readily yield to the delicate flavoring materials of the Puritan process producing that result of superiority. "The Taste Tells" THE CUDAHY PACKING COMPANY. If your dealer doesn't handle Puritan, Telephons F. W. CONRON, Manager, 1321 Jones Street, Omaha, Neb. Telephone Douglas 2401.
