

NEBRASKA GIRLS RANK HIGH WITH UNITS OF NURSES

Robert Cowell Brings Word of Hospital Girls from Cornhusker State Who Have Sailed Overseas.

"You should be proud of your Nebraska girls. They compose the best unit we have had."

These words of commendation were uttered by the captain who had charge of the daily drills of the nurse units destined for overseas work, in the armory at Twenty-fourth and Madison streets, New York, to Robert Cowell of Omaha, who dropped in one day before the departure of the unit to see the daily drill.

The Nebraska women, 125 strong were put through marching evolutions and other drills every day by regular army officers. They attained a wonderful proficiency and marched with the confidence and precision of veterans.

The nurses were given orders to hold themselves in readiness to go abroad before they went aboard the transports and their baggage was loaded on vessels destined for France ten days before their departure.

Inspiring Sight

"It was an inspiring sight to see these women at their drill," said Mr. Cowell. "All of them seemed inspired with the nobility of their service and with a sense of the new and large responsibilities they had taken upon themselves."

"The soldiers I saw in New York, and there were thousands of them, reflected the crusader spirit. Each one seemed to feel that he was the embodiment and personification of the high ideals and honor of his country and it was his duty, by his personal demeanor and conduct, to keep it inviolate."

Mr. Cowell was called upon by the Nebraska girls to make them an address in the drill hall before their departure and he responded in a most eloquent manner. He and Mrs. Cowell took leave of their daughter, Miss Mona, on one of the busiest corners of thronged Broadway, just a short time before she boarded her vessel for her trip to France.

Alleged Bootlegger Gives Police Battle When Caught

A fast and furious battle between an alleged bootlegger and an officer was staged Friday morning when Detective Whalen arrested Billie Burke, well known police character, who runs a soft drink parlor at Sixteenth and Webster streets.

According to Detective Whalen, Burke had a suspicious looking package under his arm, and when asked to explain its contents, threw the package into the street. Broken glass and a strong odor of whisky betrayed what the package had contained.

A scuffle ensued, during which Burke is said to have pulled another bottle from his pocket and struck Whalen on the head, cutting a gash that required the services of a police surgeon. He was charged with illegal possession of liquor and assault and battery.
