Plowing has a great deal to do with the eradication of insect pests and obnoxious weeds. Farmers who are troubled in this way can use an Oliver tractor disk plow to good advantage ridding themselves of these nuisances.

> Oliver No. 78 tractor plows enter and leave the ground in a short space of travel, thus enabling the operator to plow deep to the ends of the furrows.

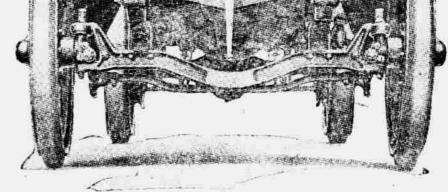

Even depth plowing is done at the end of the field by Oliver Tractor Plows. The bottoms of all Oliver Tractor Plows enter and leave the ground points first. For this reason the plows penetrate to full cutting depth or raise to full height in a short space of travel.

Built to Build Your Business

Acme Trucks are built in that painstaking manner which characterizes the work of so many manufacturing companies which have grown due to the merit of their work.

The Acme Motor Truck company of today is not the result of stock selling. It is the result of truck building which has satisfied owners and prompted them to buy more as well as recommend them to their business acquaintances.

Truck buying is in no sense bargain hunting. One should consider well the duties which a truck will be called upon to perform-Then buy a truck which will do the work and stand up under the strain. Consider the price as secondary.

Each unit of the Acme truck has been worked out in harmony with the other units so that the entire operation is economical,

Acme users everywhere are making ten to twelve miles per gallon of gasoline with the sturdy Acme 2-Ton Truck under varying road and load conditions and twelve to fourteen miles per gallon with the Acme 1-Ton Truck. The Acme 312 and 4-Ton models are just as consistent performers as their smaller brothers.

Acme owners everywhere are cutting delivery costs one-fourth to onehalf and making deliveries with speed and certainty, day after day, year in, year out. For instance, figures are at hand showing that deliveries heretofore costing 15 cents now can be made the Acme away for from 7 to 10 cents.
