

SOUTH SIDE HITCHCOCK IS URGED TO GET WATER MAINS

One More Big Organization Wants to Know Why the Senator Does Not Do Something.

Another Omaha organization has taken steps to try to wake up Senator Hitchcock, who is believed to be asleep at the switch in the matter of getting the water main extension laid from Omaha to Fort Crook. This is the Omaha Live Stock Exchange, which held a meeting and drafted a telegram which was sent to the senator, asking why work on this much-needed improvement hasn't been started, particularly as the appropriation was made last June by the federal government and the work is urgently needed in order that more men can be quartered at Fort Crook.

Within the last few weeks similar telegrams have been sent to the senator by the Associated Retailers, Omaha Manufacturers' association and the Real Estate exchange. When the senator was here early in the summer he spoke airily of his power to have the work done. "All I have to do is walk over to the War department and tell 'em to start," he said. He promised to take this little walk soon as he arrived back in Washington.

"Months have passed since then. It is presumed that the senator overestimated his power," said a prominent business man. "At any rate nothing has been done to extend the water main, though the military officers are calling for it and the money is ready to pay for it. The senator doesn't even answer the telegrams of his constituents any more, evidently, because he has no adequate answer to give for failing to get this improvement made at once, so that Omaha's military importance may be enhanced."

Whippet Tanks Make Hit as They Parade Through the Streets

Four dangerous-looking "whippet tanks" headed the Liberty loan parade that moved through the downtown streets during the noon hour, Thursday. They were fresh from the famous shops of Gas Renze in the Ak-Sar-Ben den and are correct imitations of the swift little tanks that have been doing such good service in France, except that one could see the blower wheels underneath the imitation "caterpillar tread" of the real tanks. Each tank held one man. Each stands about 10 feet high and is about 10 feet long. On the front is inscribed "Buy a Bond."

The Omaha Musicians' union band of 75 pieces marched in the parade, which moved from north of the postoffice through the downtown streets, stopping to serenade the newspaper offices and several other places. At Sixteenth and Farnam streets a stop was made and Governor Bamberger of Utah mounted one of the whippets and gave a rousing Liberty loan talk. F. A. Brogan and Frank Gaines also made loan talks.
