MR. FARMER--

The Three Essentials for Sure Crops Are Rich Soil--Sunshine--Water

The farmer in the rainfall country gets a good crop—if it rains.

The farmer in an irrigated country gets a good crop every year-he has water when his crops need it.

Without irrigation profitable farming is an uncertainty - one crop lost means two years lost. Living in a community thickly settled with good homes, less than a quarter of a mile apart—close to a good town with fine roads, schools and climate is makes farming a pleasure. You can farm 160 acres or irrigated land with less work than you can farm 160 acres in a rainfall country—this is a fact. Let us prove it.

ideal. This combined with the certainty of a good crop each and every year,

The next five years promise great returns as regards price and demands for farm products.

The scientific farmer can make big money by raising big crops.

The only certain method is irrigation. It is the last word in scientific farm-

Fifty bushels of wheat, five tons alfalfa and seventeen tons sugar beets is the average production per acre.

Improved farms sell for less than Nebraska land. All we can ask is-let us show you.
