Both Americans and French Are Trying to Cut the Cost of Living

Paris, Oct. 1.—The attitude of the French population toward the Americans today is in the highest degree friendly. There is, however, a factor which holds unpleasant possibilities and which comes into play in regions occupied by the Americans. That is the belief in the mind of the non-commercial French population that the sharp French population that the sharp rise ir the cost of living is chiefly here today, even for a Saturday, only 39 due to the prodigality of the Ameridue to the prodigality of the American troops.

zone of the interior and 55 per cent in the zone of the armies, since the beginning of 1917. point which the authorities term as "anguishing" and which provoke among the non-commercial population a sharp discontent.

The American committee on public information, of which James Kerney is the director in France, has made an investigation of the for the rise in the cost of living in the regions occupied by American troops, They are:

of tradespeople for immoderate gain; the prodigality of Americans. sidering vigorous application of the st4.00 g/15.00; lamb feeders, $10.00 g/14.35; their return journey. law which provides punishment for yearlings, good to choice, $11.00 g/11.50; British Airmen Ere unjustifiable extortion. The authorities are seriously concerned at the $9.00@11.25; wether feeders. $11.75@12.25; possibility that the Americans may carry away from France the idea the the two carry away from France the idea $6.00@7.50. the the typical Frenchman is a greedy and indifferent "mercanti." On the other hand, the American committee on public information has suggested to the American authorisuggested to the American authorities that they co-operate with the French in keeping down the cost of Hogs-Receipts, 8,000 head; market fully steady on good hogs; packing grades. living as much as is possible. It has been suggested that American action might profitably be directed at once to a reduction in the rodigality of the troops. Yankee Infantryman Become Adepts With the Pick and Shovel

France, Sept. 25.—(Correspondence of Associated Press.)—Next to his rifle the American infantryman in action in France, has learned the cherish his rick and should about a house and should be seen and Lambs—Receipts 500 head. With the American Army in ish his pick and shovel above every-thing else. By experience he has learned that his pick and shovel will save him from injury or death at times when his other implements of war are useless. In the thrust against the Ger-In the thrust against the Germans in July and August on certain days the American advanced so rapidly that the infantrymen were on the go hour after hour. As their scale became heavier some their packs became heavier some left behind piece by piece, parts of their equipment. Even in some instances doughboys tossed aside their mess kits and emergency rations and canteens and their coats, but until the last they clung to their rifles and their picks and shovels and went ahead to victory. The pick and shovel are often brought into action in a hurry when it is necessary to dig in to escape fragments of gas shells or of shrapnel. It often happens, as it did time and again during the recent French-American drive north of the Marne, that the infantryman during an advance is too far behind the enemy to make use of his rifle and that when the enemy's big guns are turned loose his only defense is to dig a hole in the field or along a roadway or wherever he may be and make this his shelter until the attack is at an end or until he is ordered elsewhere.

Correspondence of Associated Press. Behind the American Lines in France, Oct. 1 .- Bombs of an incredible size are now carried by American airmen, and some idea of their destructive capacity may be gained from the fact that they cannot be dropped at a lower altitude than 8,000 feet so greatly is the air much harried by American bombers and consequently bristles with search lights and anti-aircraft batteries. So terrific was the explosion that every searchlight went out instantly, and the airman was deprived of the plies still on hand. Four Machines Brought Down.

Recently two of them, finding themselves cut off by 20 of the enemy while returning to camp, refused to seek safety in flight. Instead they swept up at the German machines, which were all above them, and so rattled the enemy by their unexpected daring that they actually brought down four of his machines and, though not undamaged themselves, were able to land behind our lines. A successful attack was made by members of this squadron not long ago upon a troublesome enemy aerodrome which long had evaded disbeginning of 1917.

The chatcau served as the headquarters covery, so cleverly was it concealed of the officers of the German squadron, and the hangars were hidden in the edge of the woods about the house. The American squadron was acting as escort to the bombers charged with the destruction of the aerodrome. In a field about a half dozen enemy airplanes were discovered, most of them with their propellers run-

British Airmen Ereak up Attack. How two British airmen broke up an impending German attack along Lieutenant L. Walmsley of state Royal Air Force.

"Two of our young airmen," he said "sighted a bridge over the Somme which neither of them had ever seen before in three months' constant patrolling of the area. "It was evidently a temporary affair which the enemy had built during the night, and if it was now baing used to pass across men and artillery for a counter-attack somewhere, it might mean very serious developements for the British troops who were holding this particular section of front rather lightly. "All doubt on this score was quickly settled, for a long gray line could be seen leading from the north across the bridge to the south bank of the river, where a mass of about 400 soldiers was gathered. Here, indeed, was a target worthy of notice. Dives and Releases Bombs. "The leading pilot dived almost vertically, released his two bombs and watched them burst in the river, missing the bridge.

"The second pilot now dived and n five seconds the Germans saw his second bomb strike the dead center of the bridge and explode with great force, completely destroying and sinking the two middle pontoons. Detached from the moorings the remainder broke away and began to float slowly down stream. Realizing their plight, the Germans who had already crossed became quite demoralized. /Many tried to hide among the vegetation. Nothing, however, could conceal them from the devilish hail of lead which now poured down from the air above them. Round and round at a height of less than 100 feet circled the two English airplanes, the piercing staccato of their Vickers sounding high over the drone of the engines. "For ten minutes the slaughter west on, with very brief intervals and then, with their last shot fired, plunged into the water, while others engaged." Co-Operative Syndicate the Thing in France

Washington, Oct. 7. - What amounts to co-operative, syndicated buying in foreign markets has been adopted as a war measure by French manufacturers who get raw materal abroad. Commercial Attache Pierce Williams, at Paris, points out that French industries, therefore, are rapidly being centralized in syndicates acting on behalf of the French government.

These importing syndicates are known as "consortiums." Their capital stock is fixed by the government and each manufacturer requiring the raw materials is permitted to take a certain amount based on his pre-war imports. The "consortium" is permitted to
