

RAIL MEN LAND JOBS ON THEIR FORMER ROADS

Government Control Does Not Necessitate Idleness on the Part of Former Omaha
Officials.

Railroad passenger men of Omaha, who were automatically removed from their positions when the government took over the operation of the roads and discontinued many offices, are gradually landing good jobs, and mostly with the roads they formerly represented.

John P. Cummins, who was head of the Union Pacific advertising department, has become a passenger train and station inspector on the main line, his territory extending from Omaha to Ogden, and over the Denver-Kansas City line.

Godfrey is Supervisor. Tom Godfrey, for many years agent of the passenger department of the Missouri Pacific, becomes a supervisor of passenger business, having the Nebraska lines and a corner of Kansas as his territory.

Ed Perry, former traveling passenger agent for the Missouri Pacific, with Omaha as his headquarters, now is train and station inspector for the same road, with jurisdiction over the Kansas lines. His headquarters are in Hutchinson, Kan.

Sam North, formerly traveling passenger agent for the Illinois Central, remains with the company, looking after stations and general train service in western Iowa and South Dakota.

Shields' Job Unchanged. Harry Shields, former traveling passenger agent for the Wabash, continues with the company and without much change in his duties.

J. S. McNally, who was a division passenger agent for the Rock Island, is in charge of the company's passenger business, with Nebraska and Kansas as his territory.

Sandhills Section Has Good Crops; Indians
Make Fine Showing

John Batchelor, leading cattleman of the sandhill section, is here from Valentine, marketing the last of a string of 4,500 head of steers which he has grazed in the sandhills, Pine Ridge and Rosebud agencies this year.

"Conditions in the sandhills were fine this year," said he. "We cut the normal crop of hay and the grass has been fine in its quality. Wheat, corn, potatoes and other crops have turned out excellently and our people have proved that our section is no longer the remnant of the 'Great American Desert.'"

"I was at the Indian fair at the Rosebud agency recently and saw a really wonderful exhibit of the grain, root and grass crops raised on the reservation by Indians. It was a revelation. Indians have gone to farming quite extensively on the rich bottom lands and benches, especially along the White river.

"The showing they made would have been a credit to the richest agricultural counties of the southeastern part of the state and the contributions of food stuffs they have made to the general program for winning the war, during the present season, show they are real patriots at heart as well as in practice."
