

YANKEES WADE TUNDRA TO TAKE SOVIET TRENCH

American Soldiers Put Bolshevik Guns Out of Operation by Attack Across Difficult Terrain.

With the American army on the Drina, Oct. 18.—(By Associated Press.)—A trench from which an annoying bolshevik pom-pom had shelled our advanced positions for a week was taken today in an assault by American troops after a difficult march and a hot fight.

The Americans debarked at dawn from a wheezy old river steamer within sound of the bolshevik gun boats shelling villages upstream. After trudging five miles over a road deeper in mud than those in Flanders, through straggling villages and past a roadside chapel, near which are the graves of four Americans killed a month ago, the troops halted at noon to rest in the lower end of a shell-spinked village. The little garrison of the hamlet had been holding off for a week superior forces, aided by a fleet of gun-mounted river boats. Here a runner directed the contingent to slip directly through a wooded swamp to the flank of the enemy who was encircling the village.

Big Soft Pudding.

The guides led the water-soaked, mud-coated soldiers single file mile after mile through the tundra, which one American soldier described as a big soft pudding. The soldiers jumped from one moss hummock to another, across clear, cold puddles, but plunged in up to their thighs where the hummocks were infrequent.

The Americans spent hours in this frigid everglade. The sun was setting and the wind whipped the moss-bearded trees as they reached the edge of the forest bordering the road on which stood the bolshevik trenches and field guns.

The soldiers were picking blueberries as they advanced silently. The rifle of one of the men caught in the low-hanging limb of a tree and was discharged. All the troops flopped face down in the swamp water and were not discovered.

Bolsheviki Laughing.

Then they rushed quietly across a clearing to the next forest strip. They heard the bolsheviki talking and laughing. Behind the trees they formed a skirmish line within a hundred feet of the enemy.

Suddenly they were discovered. The bolsheviki shouted, "Shoot them; they are behind us." There were scattering shots and then came a clattering all along the line, the Americans shooting hard and fast as they lay flat, hugging the ground they had cursed on the march, but which now protected them from the bullets whistling overhead.

Then the Americans again sprang forward under fire to within 10 yards of the road. The bolsheviki attempted to rush them. The Americans fell back a few yards, fired as they went. One of the enemy ran into the arms of the Americans and surrendered, while another with arms uplifted tottered queerly through the swamp in their direction.

Forced to Fight.

"Don't shoot, he's wounded," one American soldier shouted. The bolsheviki, who was an officer, stumbled over a moss hummock and fell into the water. The Russian guides of the Americans questioned him, but he begged all the time that the Americans should not kill him. He said he had been forced to fight by the bolsheviki. The kind-hearted Americans lifted the officer out of the water and then dressed his wounds.

Then an officer near by shouted: "At them, men, they're scared of us." A smashing and crackling of musketry and machine guns followed and the Americans were in possession of the trench and the pom-pom gun and other equipment it contained.

Two riderless horses picked their way between the bodies of the dead bolsheviki in the road. One of the bodies was that of the captain commanding the trench. Wounded bolsheviki stood on the edge of the forest mulling incoherently. Others were fleeing into the woods on the American right, firing as they ran. They were pursued, but as darkness approached they rallied and the Americans fell back and occupied the captured trench.

The American losses were slight. Some who were lost in the swamps wandered about under shrapnel fire all night, but found their way back to the American line in the morning.

Cadets in Balloon Locate Cache of Hidden Whisky

Observation balloons are proving useful in this country as well as in France and it may be that the Omaha morals squad will employ them to use in helping them ferret out bootleggers.

Two cadets from the Fort Omaha Balloon school were doing observation work Thursday when they noticed two men in a small power boat in the Missouri river who made a landing near Florence. The cadets watched the men for awhile and then grew suspicious and notified officials at the fort who ordered two soldiers to mount their motorcycles and ride to the place post haste.

When the soldiers arrived at the landing the men had disappeared but a search disclosed a cave where the soldiers found 138 pints of whisky.

The whisky was confiscated and officers are watching for the bootleggers.

SUB SINKINGS DECREASE; MORE U-BOATS SUNK

Summer Months Show Gratifying Record in Reference to Activities of German Undersea Ships.

American Naval Base, France, Oct. 18.—Record of submarine activity for summer months, June, July, and August, the period most favorable to submarines, is now practically made up and shows two highly satisfactory results; a steady fall in the allied shipping sunk and a steady rise in the submarines sunk. This summer period, which has also covered the tremendous troop arrivals, is equally satisfactory, not only of the incoming troop ships being lost and every soldier being landed. Such losses as have occurred have been on outgoing ships, mainly freighters.

Decreased Losses.

The record of tonnage losses for the summer will be around 260,000 tons, or about 50,000 tons less than the monthly losses at the opening of the year, and 100,000 tons less than the losses in March.

As to the loss of submarines, the one fact known definitely is that they are being destroyed faster than they are being built. But there is not the same exact data as to the fluctuations of losses, as these are carefully concealed by the enemy and the loss of an underwater craft is much less apparent than on the surface. But a pretty accurate check is kept on those which disappear and the new ones taking their places.

Yankee and British Troops Take 2,000 Hungarians in Single Day

With the Anglo-American forces in the Leateau Sector, Oct. 18.—(By Associated Press.)—The American and British made good progress today and the line was advanced to east of L'Arbre de Guise, 500 yards west of Ribeaucourt and 500 yards east of La Vallée Mulatre. The Americans are now driving toward Mazinghe and the British toward Wazirgny, which they are nearing, but both groups had to fight all the way against a stubborn resistance offered by seven German divisions. Operations were somewhat hampered because the airplanes could do no work before midday on account of the haze.

Washington, Oct. 18.—Questionnaires of men of the 37 to 46 and 18-year age classes under the draft were ordered released today by Provost Marshal General Crowder in all local board districts where the classification of other groups has been completed.

FLANDERS DRIVE SHATTERS HUNS' DREAM OF POWER

Forced Evacuation of Coast Humiliating and Ruinous for Authors of War, Says London Paper.

London, Oct. 18.—The German dream of dominating the Flanders coast has come to an end, the morning newspapers say, and they speak of Thursday as a memorable day in the war.

The Belgian coast ports, says the Daily Telegraph in referring to the German withdrawal from the channel coast, were symbols of the enemy's U-boat campaign and the threat to Great Britain. The evacuation of these places, it adds, is doubly humiliating and morally ruinous for the authors of the war.

Beneficiaries of Troops Need No Collectors

Washington, Oct. 18.—The public was asked by the War department today to bring to its attention any instance of persons seeking fees for collecting insurance or allotments of soldiers who have died in the service. Renewed assurance was given that the government will make settlements in such cases without outside intervention, and that beneficiaries who want legal advice may obtain it without charge from draft district legal advisory boards.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.
