SOCIETY

THE best doctors in the country—this is the tribute paid Omaha physicians connected with Nebraska base hospital No. 49 in France, by Miss Mary White Jones, daughter of Mr. Harry Jones, of Minneapolis, who is a worker in the hospital hut near Hospital No. 49.

Miss Jones gives a clear idea of the work of the hut, which is located just across the road from the hospital. As soon as the men are able to walk they cross the street eager to be entertained and to have some one listen while they tell how they were wounded.

In speaking of the work of the hospital and the great amount of work done, Miss Jones says: "You people at home have no idea of the casualties in this war. When you think that every day over 1,000 arrive at the hospitals of this section alone, you will better realize it. I am glad that we have the very best doctors in the country to take care of them, and nurses, too, who cannot be beaten."

Home Wedding. A quiet home wedding took place at the home of the bride Wednesday afternoon, when Miss Helen Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albin Johnson, became the bride of Charles Johnson of Omaha. Dr. A. A. De Lorme read the marriage lines.

This is the first real church affair given by the women since war was declared, all their energies having been devoted to war-work. The present affair will be more in the nature of a pleasant reunion of members, their friends and neighbors than anything else.

Help! Calls Mrs. Doane. A call is being sent broadcast by Mrs. Doane, secretary of the Charities, for automobiles and help of every kind. Because many of the regular helpers are ill with influenza and the trouble caused by the street car strike, the organization is crippled to such an extent that unless volunteer assistance is offered immediately, Mrs. Doane fears that the work of the Charities will be seriously handicapped.

Lehmer-Lambert Nuptials. The marriage of Miss Edith Lambert to Mr. Henry L. Lehmer, took place Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Lambert. Only the members of the family were present at the ceremony which was performed by Rev. Mr. Stitt of Papillion.

Mr. and Mrs. Lehmer left Wednesday evening for California, where they will make their home.

DREAMLAND ADVENTURE

The Imagination Stone By DADDY. (Billy Belgium gives Peggy an Imagination Stone with which she changes Animals, Birds and Persons into other things. She drops the stone and two squirrels pick it up, promptly changing themselves into Billy and Peggy, and Billy and Peggy into Squirrels.)

CHAPTER V. Threats of Danger. THE Raven, who was Reddy Woodpecker transformed, was dodging back and forth to escape the slashing attacks of the Hawk, who was Blue Jay, made into a bird of prey by the mysterious effects of the Imagination Stone.

And above the Hawk circled the ferocious Eagle, who was Judge Owl transformed. The Hawk was so intent upon making a meal of the Raven that he was not paying much attention to the Eagle, but Peggy and Billy, frisking about on the topmost branch of the tree, could see that the Eagle was getting ready to swoop down and take a vigorous part in the fray.

"Oh, Blue Jay will tear Reddy Woodpecker to pieces! I wish I could change them back," squeaked Peggy in her squirrel voice.

"And Judge Owl is going to claw Blue Jay to bits," squeaked Billy. "We must get the Imagination Stone back and transform them into their real selves," squeaked Peggy, quivering with fear for her feathered friends, whose natures had been so dangerously changed by her prank.

"Woe, woe, woe!" croaked the Raven, dropping utterly exhausted among the branches of the oak tree. Right after him, just ready to grab him, was the Hawk. And right after the Hawk, swooping down, was the Eagle. But just as the Hawk seemed about to sink his claws into the tired Raven, he stopped himself. And just as the Eagle started to clutch the Hawk he halted. The birds of prey had suddenly seen more tempting dinners—two soft, plump squirrels. With harsh hunting screams, they launched themselves straight at Peggy and Billy.

Peggy gave a quick, mad leap, leaving a tuft of fur in the Hawk's talons. Billy followed, but with part of his tail torn off by the grasp of the Eagle. From branch to branch and limb to limb Peggy and Billy fairly flew, instinctively saving themselves from long falls, but never stopping to gain a firm foothold.

Away down below was a squirrel house, which Peggy had put up in the tree for Perky and Jerky, but which they had never used because they preferred their nest of leaves high up in the branches. It was for this house that Peggy and Billy now scampered, rushing into it and cowering as far away from the opening as possible.

The Hawk and the Eagle could not follow them there and they could hear the disappointed birds giving hungry screams far above. The Raven had taken advantage of the change in the chase to flop down into a hiding place under the eaves of the porch.

"I'm going to bag that Eagle and Hawk," he shouted. At first this made Peggy feel safer. Then she grew quickly frightened, for she remembered that the Eagle was really her friend Judge Owl and the Hawk was Blue Jay. She didn't want either one shot.

"Woe! Woe! I told you that Imagination Stone would bring dire woe!" It was the Raven croaking under the porch eaves.

Another man came running wearily along the sidewalk. It was Tony, the monkey, turned into an organ-grinder. He was still clapping Sylvester, the man turned into a monkey, but he was almost dead from fatigue. As Peggy and Billy looked at him, he turned to a telephone pole and climbed up it part way, but he was so tired he threatened to fall back at any minute.

There was a sound of sobbing, too, and down the street searching everywhere came a little girl. It was the policeman's daughter.

"Papa, papa," she was calling. "Can anyone tell me where my papa is? He's lost and maybe we'll never see him again."

Peggy looked at Billy and he looked at her. The same thought came to both of them. Supposing they couldn't ever recover the Imagination Stone and turn the Bulldog back into the policeman!

Even as they thought this, the Bulldog came panting along on the trail of Tony. He was tired and angry. Foam was dripping from his mouth. "Mad dog! Mad dog! Somebody shoot the mad dog!" shrieked the little girl, fleeing from her own transformed father.

"Mad dog!" wailed Tony, so tired and frightened that at any moment he might tumble from the pole. "We've got to get that Stone back," whispered Billy.

"Come on," said Peggy, creeping out of the squirrel house and leading the way to the window ledge, from which they could look into the room where Jerky, the squirrel made into a girl, was taking a music lesson in Peggy's place. There they saw an astonishing sight.

(Tomorrow will be told the exciting things that happen when Peggy and Billy try to recover the stone.)

Alleges Concealed Property to Reduce Alimony Demanded. Hilda Getscher, divorced wife of Henry C. Getscher and mother of their nine children, has brought suit to set aside the divorce decree on the grounds it was fraudulently obtained on perjured testimony. She names the State Savings and Loan association as defendants with her husband in order to prevent him from removing property held in this bank outside the jurisdiction of the court.

Mrs. Getscher asserts her husband is worth $32,800, although at the time of the divorce agreement, when she was awarded $3,500, Getscher represented the latter sum to be one-half his entire holdings. Since then she learned he owned property at Eighteenth and Ohio, valued at $11,000; certificates of $10,000 each in the Conservative Loan and State Savings and Loan associations, besides other valuable property.

Not aware of this and because of her dependency over her husband's conduct, which included intoxication and consorting with other women, she alleges, she consented to the divorce settlement which she now wishes set aside.

Eight of the couple's children are living. They were married in Fremont in 1885.

Von Dorn Objects to Paying His Divorced Wife Money. John E. von Dorn has filed a supplemental petition against Louise E. von Dorn, his former wife, and John M. MacFarland, asking the court for a temporary injunction in so far as the plaintiff is required to pay any money to Louise von Dorn until appeals now pending in the supreme court have been determined.

On final hearing, he asks that this injunction be made permanent and for such relief as the court shall seem just and that plaintiff shall recover his costs.

This is another chapter in the long story of the Von Dorns' domestic troubles. After divorcing Louise von Dorn, the plaintiff, who is a prominent Omaha attorney, married his former secretary, Miss Nell Rubin, Louise von Dorn brought suit to annul the divorce, assisting that she and Von Dorn lived as man and wife after the divorce was granted and before he married Miss Rubin. She asked alimony. The case is now in the supreme court.

The government recognizes that placing the thousands of demobilized soldiers in positions is an enormous task and is attempting to relieve congested conditions through the work of these men at the army posts before demobilization is begun, so that the soldiers may go directly from Army life to a position in civil life, with no intervening period of unemployment.

The couple's domestic troubles were first aired in September, 1912, when Maurer asked the court for a restraining order to prevent his wife, or her mother, Mrs. Eva M.
