

Train Service Failure
As Jitneys Thrive on All Runs About City

Railroad operating and traffic officials have come to the conclusion that operating suburban trains in and out of Omaha during the street railroad strike is not profitable. Thursday the Northwestern put on a line of shuttle trains between the Broadway depot in Council Bluffs and the Union Station, Omaha. During the entire day these trains handled 84 passengers. The service has been ordered discontinued.

Late Thursday Union Pacific shut the train service between Omaha and South Omaha was started. It provided for hourly service during the morning and evening, with a train every two hours during the middle of the day. It was not a winner, the eight trains carrying less than 200 people during the day and evening. Friday trains started out on the hourly schedule, but carrying only few passengers. Service was maintained yesterday, but if business does not pick up, trains will be discontinued.
