You were compelled to buy Liberty bonds in order to evade mob law and escape being placed on the slacker list. I would like to see you buy these bonds even though they are not compulsory, These bonds are better than Liberty bonds and they give you more interest. Of course I know that there is nothing better, and bigger than Uncle Sam, but I would rather deal with a poor man and have him honest than deal with a rich man and have him a scoundrel."

The pictures of the South Sea will be shown at a later booking.

Priscilla Dean's newest story is all told in the title "She Hired A Husband." It might be stated that Priscilla plays the part of a beautiful debutante, while the man she hired was a bearded and very rough looking lumberiack.

Monroe Salisbury's latest play, "The Light of Victory," shows the big star in a dramatic triumph built about navy and submarine scenes.

"A Daughter of the Old South" is an original screen story by Alizia Ramsey and Rudolph De Cordova. The screen version is by Margaret Turnbull. Pauline Frederick plays the role of an emotional Creole girl who discovers the despicable character of her admirer and exposes him to his fiancee. She then finds consolation and sympathy in the aims of her Spanish suitor whom she had scorned because he was forced upon her. The play is pocked at the Rialto December 27.
