

AUTOMOBILES MUST HAVE CITY LICENSE TAGS

New Wheel Tax Ordinance is Now in Effect and All Vehicle Owners Must Pay.

Have you a city license on your automobile? If not, you'll have to get one.

The new wheel tax ordinance went into effect January 1. It requires payment of an annual tax ranging from $2 to $7 on all automobiles, trucks and horse-drawn vehicles.

It is expected to bring $50,000 a year to the city treasury.

The tax is payable to City Clerk Hunter, who will issue the tags. These are of oval shape and less than half the size of the state license tags.

Automobile "pleasure cars" carrying five passengers or less must pay $2; more than five passengers, $4. Automobiles used for carrying passengers for hire must pay $5 and $7.50 in the two classes.

Trucks and delivery wagons must pay $3 for a capacity of one and one-half tons or less; $4 for one and one-half to two and one-half tons capacity, and $7 for more than two and one-half tons capacity.

Eases Stiff Joints, Pain in Muscles

"Ulypto Ointment" From the Eucalyptus Tree Stops Inflammation and Pain At Once.

You folks with muscle pains, aching joints, cold in the shoulders or back, stiff neck, sore throat, neuralgia, sciatica, chest cold, catarrh, nose stoppage, piles, hemorrhoids, and on any inflammation and congestion. Hunt the word "Ulypto Ointment" and you will find it. It is a relief to the most distressing conditions.

It produces remarkable results also on stiff joints, rheumatism, neuritis, neuralgia, sciatica, nose stoppage, piles, hemorrhoids, and on any inflammation and congestion. Hunt the word "Ulypto Ointment" and you will find it. It is a relief to the most distressing conditions.

FINE FOR RHEUMATISM

Musterole Loosens Up Those Stiff Joints—Drives Out Pain

You'll know why thousands use Musterole once you experience the glad relief it gives.

Get a jar at once from the nearest drug store. It is a clean, white ointment, made with the oil of mustard. Better than a mustard plaster, it does not blister. Brings ease and comfort while it is being rubbed on!

Musterole is recommended by many doctors and nurses. Millions of jars are used annually for bronchitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frost-bitten feet, colds of the chest (it often prevents pneumonia). 30c and 60c jars; hospital size $2.50.

RELIABLE PRESCRIPTION FOR THE KIDNEYS

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention the Omaha Daily Bee.—Adv.

DROPSY TREATED FREE

By Dr. Miles, the Great Specialist, Who Sends a $3.75 Trial Treatment Free.

Many Report Cured After Doctors Failed.

At first no disease is a little more harmless than dropsy: a swelling of the eyelids, hands, feet, ankles or abdomen. Finally great shortness of breath, cough, faint spells, sometimes nausea and vomiting, and a lingering and wretched death if the dropsy is not cured.

Dr. Miles has been known as a leading specialist in these diseases for 20 years. His liberal offer of a $3.75 treatment free to all sufferers is certainly worthy of serious consideration. You may never have such an opportunity again.

The Grand Dropsy Treatment consists of four dropsy remedies in one, also Tonic Tablets and Purge-Lax for removing the water. This treatment is specially prescribed for each patient and is three times as successful as that of most physicians. It usually relieves the first day, and removes swellings in six days of most cases. Delay is dangerous.

Send for Remarkable Reports of Cures. All afflicted readers may have Book, Examination Chart, Opinions, Advice, and a Two-Week Trial Treatment Free. Write at once. Describe your case. Address, Dr. Miles, Dept. 114, 182 E. 172 Franklin St., Elkhart, Ind.

CARMEN OF OMAHA PRESENT THEIR TROUBLES

Points Out Difficulties Now Encountered Through Antiquated System and How Reform is Possible.

By JOHN F. CORDEAL, Editor of The Bee.—Having heretofore served in two sessions of the Nebraska legislature, and being a member-elect of the legislature which will convene on January 7, I have been interested in the suggestions of Hon. P. A. Barrows, the incoming lieutenant governor, as to the need for reforming legislative procedure. Nebraska celebrated her semi-centennial in 1917. During that year meetings were held in different parts of the state to commemorate the event. At these meetings our greatness was extolled, and our progress was noted. Our people took satisfaction in the accomplishments of the half century that had elapsed since the state's admission to the union. From an outpost of civilization we had become a member of the great commonwealth of states. Our material resources had increased a hundred fold, and our population was more than ten times what it had been fifty years before. The railroad and the automobile had replaced the oxcart as the means of transportation. The log house and the dug-out had been superseded by the comfortable and convenient houses. Even the proverbially conservative farmer was using labor and time-saving devices which were unknown to his father.

Machinery is antiquated. Yet the legislature was, and still is, employing the same antiquated machinery that was old in territorial times. I recall an occasion when two bills, introduced by two different members, amendatory of the same section of the statute, were both passed by the legislature and signed by the governor. Afterwards a serious controversy arose as to which one of these was, in fact, the law.

It is a common complaint that legislative enactments are difficult to understand. The reason for this is because bills are too frequently framed by men who not only have no knowledge of the technical verbiage in which they should be clothed, but who are unskilled in the use of the English language. This assertion is not intended as a reflection upon the mental attainments of the membership of the present or of past legislatures, for I believe I am safe in saying a very large proportion of the measures introduced at every session are drafted by nonmembers. In fact I am of the opinion that almost all bills are prepared by members of the legal profession. I regret to say their work is too frequently, hastily and unskillfully done. The time, not only of the standing committees, but of the committee of the whole, is taken up, to a far greater extent than it should be, in consideration of the substances of proposed laws, but of their construction.

The correction of clerical, grammatical and rhetorical errors is essential, but the time of the members of the legislature should not be so largely consumed in making them. As an illustration of the absurdities to which some of the blunders lead, a bill was enacted into law a few years ago which prohibited the shooting, during certain seasons of Irish "peasants."

Troubles Easily Remedied. Everyone who has participated in or who has witnessed the disgraceful haste and scramble that attends the transaction of legislative business toward the close of a session cannot but deplore the existence of a system that permits one-fourth of more in volume of the work of a session of more than three months to be crowded into the last legislative day. The difficulty arises, chiefly, from the dilatory tactics that characterize the proceedings during the early part of the sessions. The ambition of members to secure the passage of measures in which they are interested, and the custom of each house to ignore the bills that come from the other end of the capitol until its own are out of the way.

An agreement should be reached by the membership of both bodies that each house shall act promptly on bills sent over from the other house, and that in each house at least one day of every week shall be devoted exclusively to the bills that have been passed by the other.

All bills for the appropriation of money, regardless of the purpose for which it is to be expended, should be considered by one committee in each body, and if joint sessions of the committees of both houses to which such measures are referred were held, a great deal of time and energy could be conserved.

I have touched upon only a few of the evils that exist, but I feel that I have already taken more of your space than I should. I want merely to add that I have no patience with any who may say that reform is impossible. I am confident if some simple changes of the character I have mentioned were made, that legislation would be less haphazard and more scientific than it is.

Fewer Bills, Better Laws, Says Senator Cordeal

Points Out Difficulties Now Encountered Through Antiquated System and How Reform is Possible.

By JOHN F. CORDEAL, Editor of The Bee.—Having heretofore served in two sessions of the Nebraska legislature, and being a member-elect of the legislature which will convene on January 7, I have been interested in the suggestions of Hon. P. A. Barrows, the incoming lieutenant governor, as to the need for reforming legislative procedure. Nebraska celebrated her semi-centennial in 1917. During that year meetings were held in different parts of the state to commemorate the event. At these meetings our greatness was extolled, and our progress was noted. Our people took satisfaction in the accomplishments of the half century that had elapsed since the state's admission to the union. From an outpost of civilization we had become a member of the great commonwealth of states. Our material resources had increased a hundred fold, and our population was more than ten times what it had been fifty years before. The railroad and the automobile had replaced the oxcart as the means of transportation. The log house and the dug-out had been superseded by the comfortable and convenient houses. Even the proverbially conservative farmer was using labor and time-saving devices which were unknown to his father.

Machinery is antiquated. Yet the legislature was, and still is, employing the same antiquated machinery that was old in territorial times. I recall an occasion when two bills, introduced by two different members, amendatory of the same section of the statute, were both passed by the legislature and signed by the governor. Afterwards a serious controversy arose as to which one of these was, in fact, the law.

It is a common complaint that legislative enactments are difficult to understand. The reason for this is because bills are too frequently framed by men who not only have no knowledge of the technical verbiage in which they should be clothed, but who are unskilled in the use of the English language. This assertion is not intended as a reflection upon the mental attainments of the membership of the present or of past legislatures, for I believe I am safe in saying a very large proportion of the measures introduced at every session are drafted by nonmembers. In fact I am of the opinion that almost all bills are prepared by members of the legal profession. I regret to say their work is too frequently, hastily and unskillfully done. The time, not only of the standing committees, but of the committee of the whole, is taken up, to a far greater extent than it should be, in consideration of the substances of proposed laws, but of their construction.

The correction of clerical, grammatical and rhetorical errors is essential, but the time of the members of the legislature should not be so largely consumed in making them. As an illustration of the absurdities to which some of the blunders lead, a bill was enacted into law a few years ago which prohibited the shooting, during certain seasons of Irish "peasants."

Troubles Easily Remedied. Everyone who has participated in or who has witnessed the disgraceful haste and scramble that attends the transaction of legislative business toward the close of a session cannot but deplore the existence of a system that permits one-fourth of more in volume of the work of a session of more than three months to be crowded into the last legislative day. The difficulty arises, chiefly, from the dilatory tactics that characterize the proceedings during the early part of the sessions. The ambition of members to secure the passage of measures in which they are interested, and the custom of each house to ignore the bills that come from the other end of the capitol until its own are out of the way.

An agreement should be reached by the membership of both bodies that each house shall act promptly on bills sent over from the other house, and that in each house at least one day of every week shall be devoted exclusively to the bills that have been passed by the other.

All bills for the appropriation of money, regardless of the purpose for which it is to be expended, should be considered by one committee in each body, and if joint sessions of the committees of both houses to which such measures are referred were held, a great deal of time and energy could be conserved.

I have touched upon only a few of the evils that exist, but I feel that I have already taken more of your space than I should. I want merely to add that I have no patience with any who may say that reform is impossible. I am confident if some simple changes of the character I have mentioned were made, that legislation would be less haphazard and more scientific than it is.

WILSON HAS NOT YET DECLARED LEAGUE VIEWS

(Continued From Page One.)

suggested by the president as a condition to admission to the league as "one of us." This interpretation would seem to harmonize Mr. Wilson's idea of a league of nations with the practical requirements of Clemenceau.

Such a league must admit to membership any and every nation whose moral attributes carry assurance that its convenants will be observed and carry trust that its ideals are not limited to its security or the advancement of its own material interests.

Tested by these requirements its initial membership cannot be extended to any other nations besides the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium.

Not "Balance of Power." Such a league would differ from the balance of power, because it would be a community of interests in the preservation of peace based upon right and justice, not a mere equipoise created by the coincidence of equal forces. Such a league would secure the world from any future project for world dominion, such as the pan-Germanic league, which would keep smaller powers, whose ethical conceptions are less highly developed from the small conflicts which in the past have been the prelude of great wars.

But until such a league, by its existence and character, shall have demonstrated not only the safety of Great Britain, but America as well, from all possible aggression, the seas cannot safely be left free to an enemy in time of war more than can the land.

When President Wilson assured Clemenceau that he would not have him alter his attitude toward Lloyd George on this subject, it is possible that he had in mind the requirements of existing conditions, while the principle of the freedom of the seas, included in his 14 points, referred to an ideal of the future, when "all of us" shall include every nation whose organized strength might permit it to make mischief in the world.

Such an interpretation may serve to justify reports of complete harmony between Mr. Wilson and the heads of the allied nations.

U. S. Marshals Take Charge of Car Lines in Kansas City, Kan.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 2.—Under orders from Judge John C. Pollock of the federal court, United States marshals today took control of the street cars and property of the Kansas City Railway company in Kansas City, Kan., as an outgrowth of the strike of motormen and conductors in progress since December 11. Trainmen, as well as guards, are being employed by the federal authorities and assigned to duty as rapidly as they can be sworn in. All are armed.

The action of Judge Pollock was taken on an intervening petition of the Kansas City (Kan.) Chamber of Commerce in an injunction suit of the street railway company against the strikers, asking protection of property.

In Kansas City, Mo., there was no change in the strike situation.

Colds Cause Grip and Influenza. LAXATIVE AND ANTIDOTE. Tablets remove the GLOBE'S signature on the box.—Advt.

The New Little Democratic Hungarian KOSHER RESTAURANT At 316 So. 15th St., Upstairs

is open. Sanitary and well-aired up-to-date dining room; all cooking guaranteed; best meals in the city. Try one of the real Hungarian meals. If you come once you will come all the time.

THE NEW SKINNER'S THE BEST BREAD SUCCESSOR TO METZGER'S

ROSENBLATT CUTS THE COAL PRICE EVERY KNOWN KIND OF COAL DOUGLAS-530

Sweeping Reforms. Washington, Jan. 2.—Sweeping electrical reforms effected in Sweden providing the "most extended universal suffrage for both men and women irrespective of taxability," are described in a cable dispatch received today by Swedish Minister Ekengren from the foreign minister at Stockholm.

same end. I recall an occasion when two bills, introduced by two different members, amendatory of the same section of the statute, were both passed by the legislature and signed by the governor. Afterwards a serious controversy arose as to which one of these was, in fact, the law.

It is a common complaint that legislative enactments are difficult to understand. The reason for this is because bills are too frequently framed by men who not only have no knowledge of the technical verbiage in which they should be clothed, but who are unskilled in the use of the English language. This assertion is not intended as a reflection upon the mental attainments of the membership of the present or of past legislatures, for I believe I am safe in saying a very large proportion of the measures introduced at every session are drafted by nonmembers. In fact I am of the opinion that almost all bills are prepared by members of the legal profession. I regret to say their work is too frequently, hastily and unskillfully done. The time, not only of the standing committees, but of the committee of the whole, is taken up, to a far greater extent than it should be, in consideration of the substances of proposed laws, but of their construction.

The correction of clerical, grammatical and rhetorical errors is essential, but the time of the members of the legislature should not be so largely consumed in making them. As an illustration of the absurdities to which some of the blunders lead, a bill was enacted into law a few years ago which prohibited the shooting, during certain seasons of Irish "peasants."

Troubles Easily Remedied. Everyone who has participated in or who has witnessed the disgraceful haste and scramble that attends the transaction of legislative business toward the close of a session cannot but deplore the existence of a system that permits one-fourth of more in volume of the work of a session of more than three months to be crowded into the last legislative day. The difficulty arises, chiefly, from the dilatory tactics that characterize the proceedings during the early part of the sessions. The ambition of members to secure the passage of measures in which they are interested, and the custom of each house to ignore the bills that come from the other end of the capitol until its own are out of the way.

An agreement should be reached by the membership of both bodies that each house shall act promptly on bills sent over from the other house, and that in each house at least one day of every week shall be devoted exclusively to the bills that have been passed by the other.

All bills for the appropriation of money, regardless of the purpose for which it is to be expended, should be considered by one committee in each body, and if joint sessions of the committees of both houses to which such measures are referred were held, a great deal of time and energy could be conserved.

I have touched upon only a few of the evils that exist, but I feel that I have already taken more of your space than I should. I want merely to add that I have no patience with any who may say that reform is impossible. I am confident if some simple changes of the character I have mentioned were made, that legislation would be less haphazard and more scientific than it is.

WILSON HAS NOT YET DECLARED LEAGUE VIEWS

(Continued From Page One.)

suggested by the president as a condition to admission to the league as "one of us." This interpretation would seem to harmonize Mr. Wilson's idea of a league of nations with the practical requirements of Clemenceau.

Such a league must admit to membership any and every nation whose moral attributes carry assurance that its convenants will be observed and carry trust that its ideals are not limited to its security or the advancement of its own material interests.

Tested by these requirements its initial membership cannot be extended to any other nations besides the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium.

Not "Balance of Power." Such a league would differ from the balance of power, because it would be a community of interests in the preservation of peace based upon right and justice, not a mere equipoise created by the coincidence of equal forces. Such a league would secure the world from any future project for world dominion, such as the pan-Germanic league, which would keep smaller powers, whose ethical conceptions are less highly developed from the small conflicts which in the past have been the prelude of great wars.

But until such a league, by its existence and character, shall have demonstrated not only the safety of Great Britain, but America as well, from all possible aggression, the seas cannot safely be left free to an enemy in time of war more than can the land.

When President Wilson assured Clemenceau that he would not have him alter his attitude toward Lloyd George on this subject, it is possible that he had in mind the requirements of existing conditions, while the principle of the freedom of the seas, included in his 14 points, referred to an ideal of the future, when "all of us" shall include every nation whose organized strength might permit it to make mischief in the world.

Such an interpretation may serve to justify reports of complete harmony between Mr. Wilson and the heads of the allied nations.

U. S. Marshals Take Charge of Car Lines in Kansas City, Kan.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 2.—Under orders from Judge John C. Pollock of the federal court, United States marshals today took control of the street cars and property of the Kansas City Railway company in Kansas City, Kan., as an outgrowth of the strike of motormen and conductors in progress since December 11. Trainmen, as well as guards, are being employed by the federal authorities and assigned to duty as rapidly as they can be sworn in. All are armed.

The action of Judge Pollock was taken on an intervening petition of the Kansas City (Kan.) Chamber of Commerce in an injunction suit of the street railway company against the strikers, asking protection of property.

In Kansas City, Mo., there was no change in the strike situation.

Colds Cause Grip and Influenza. LAXATIVE AND ANTIDOTE. Tablets remove the GLOBE'S signature on the box.—Advt.

The New Little Democratic Hungarian KOSHER RESTAURANT At 316 So. 15th St., Upstairs

is open. Sanitary and well-aired up-to-date dining room; all cooking guaranteed; best meals in the city. Try one of the real Hungarian meals. If you come once you will come all the time.

THE NEW SKINNER'S THE BEST BREAD SUCCESSOR TO METZGER'S

ROSENBLATT CUTS THE COAL PRICE EVERY KNOWN KIND OF COAL DOUGLAS-530

Sweeping Reforms. Washington, Jan. 2.—Sweeping electrical reforms effected in Sweden providing the "most extended universal suffrage for both men and women irrespective of taxability," are described in a cable dispatch received today by Swedish Minister Ekengren from the foreign minister at Stockholm.

same end. I recall an occasion when two bills, introduced by two different members, amendatory of the same section of the statute, were both passed by the legislature and signed by the governor. Afterwards a serious controversy arose as to which one of these was, in fact, the law.

It is a common complaint that legislative enactments are difficult to understand. The reason for this is because bills are too frequently framed by men who not only have no knowledge of the technical verbiage in which they should be clothed, but who are unskilled in the use of the English language. This assertion is not intended as a reflection upon the mental attainments of the membership of the present or of past legislatures, for I believe I am safe in saying a very large proportion of the measures introduced at every session are drafted by nonmembers. In fact I am of the opinion that almost all bills are prepared by members of the legal profession. I regret to say their work is too frequently, hastily and unskillfully done. The time, not only of the standing committees, but of the committee of the whole, is taken up, to a far greater extent than it should be, in consideration of the substances of proposed laws, but of their construction.

same end. I recall an occasion when two bills, introduced by two different members, amendatory of the same section of the statute, were both passed by the legislature and signed by the governor. Afterwards a serious controversy arose as to which one of these was, in fact, the law.

It is a common complaint that legislative enactments are difficult to understand. The reason for this is because bills are too frequently framed by men who not only have no knowledge of the technical verbiage in which they should be clothed, but who are unskilled in the use of the English language. This assertion is not intended as a reflection upon the mental attainments of the membership of the present or of past legislatures, for I believe I am safe in saying a very large proportion of the measures introduced at every session are drafted by nonmembers. In fact I am of the opinion that almost all bills are prepared by members of the legal profession. I regret to say their work is too frequently, hastily and unskillfully done. The time, not only of the standing committees, but of the committee of the whole, is taken up, to a far greater extent than it should be, in consideration of the substances of proposed laws, but of their construction.

The correction of clerical, grammatical and rhetorical errors is essential, but the time of the members of the legislature should not be so largely consumed in making them. As an illustration of the absurdities to which some of the blunders lead, a bill was enacted into law a few years ago which prohibited the shooting, during certain seasons of Irish "peasants."

Troubles Easily Remedied. Everyone who has participated in or who has witnessed the disgraceful haste and scramble that attends the transaction of legislative business toward the close of a session cannot but deplore the existence of a system that permits one-fourth of more in volume of the work of a session of more than three months to be crowded into the last legislative day. The difficulty arises, chiefly, from the dilatory tactics that characterize the proceedings during the early part of the sessions. The ambition of members to secure the passage of measures in which they are interested, and the custom of each house to ignore the bills that come from the other end of the capitol until its own are out of the way.

An agreement should be reached by the membership of both bodies that each house shall act promptly on bills sent over from the other house, and that in each house at least one day of every week shall be devoted exclusively to the bills that have been passed by the other.

All bills for the appropriation of money, regardless of the purpose for which it is to be expended, should be considered by one committee in each body, and if joint sessions of the committees of both houses to which such measures are referred were held, a great deal of time and energy could be conserved.

I have touched upon only a few of the evils that exist, but I feel that I have already taken more of your space than I should. I want merely to add that I have no patience with any who may say that reform is impossible. I am confident if some simple changes of the character I have mentioned were made, that legislation would be less haphazard and more scientific than it is.

WILSON HAS NOT YET DECLARED LEAGUE VIEWS

(Continued From Page One.)

suggested by the president as a condition to admission to the league as "one of us." This interpretation would seem to harmonize Mr. Wilson's idea of a league of nations with the practical requirements of Clemenceau.

Such a league must admit to membership any and every nation whose moral attributes carry assurance that its convenants will be observed and carry trust that its ideals are not limited to its security or the advancement of its own material interests.

Tested by these requirements its initial membership cannot be extended to any other nations besides the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium.

Not "Balance of Power." Such a league would differ from the balance of power, because it would be a community of interests in the preservation of peace based upon right and justice, not a mere equipoise created by the coincidence of equal forces. Such a league would secure the world from any future project for world dominion, such as the pan-Germanic league, which would keep smaller powers, whose ethical conceptions are less highly developed from the small conflicts which in the past have been the prelude of great wars.

But until such a league, by its existence and character, shall have demonstrated not only the safety of Great Britain, but America as well, from all possible aggression, the seas cannot safely be left free to an enemy in time of war more than can the land.

When President Wilson assured Clemenceau that he would not have him alter his attitude toward Lloyd George on this subject, it is possible that he had in mind the requirements of existing conditions, while the principle of the freedom of the seas, included in his 14 points, referred to an ideal of the future, when "all of us" shall include every nation whose organized strength might permit it to make mischief in the world.

Such an interpretation may serve to justify reports of complete harmony between Mr. Wilson and the heads of the allied nations.

U. S. Marshals Take Charge of Car Lines in Kansas City, Kan.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 2.—Under orders from Judge John C. Pollock of the federal court, United States marshals today took control of the street cars and property of the Kansas City Railway company in Kansas City, Kan., as an outgrowth of the strike of motormen and conductors in progress since December 11. Trainmen, as well as guards, are being employed by the federal authorities and assigned to duty as rapidly as they can be sworn in. All are armed.

The action of Judge Pollock was taken on an intervening petition of the Kansas City (Kan.) Chamber of Commerce in an injunction suit of the street railway company against the strikers, asking protection of property.

In Kansas City, Mo., there was no change in the strike situation.

Colds Cause Grip and Influenza. LAXATIVE AND ANTIDOTE. Tablets remove the GLOBE'S signature on the box.—Advt.

The New Little Democratic Hungarian KOSHER RESTAURANT At 316 So. 15th St., Upstairs

is open. Sanitary and well-aired up-to-date dining room; all cooking guaranteed; best meals in the city. Try one of the real Hungarian meals. If you come once you will come all the time.

THE NEW SKINNER'S THE BEST BREAD SUCCESSOR TO METZGER'S

ROSENBLATT CUTS THE COAL PRICE EVERY KNOWN KIND OF COAL DOUGLAS-530

Sweeping Reforms. Washington, Jan. 2.—Sweeping electrical reforms effected in Sweden providing the "most extended universal suffrage for both men and women irrespective of taxability," are described in a cable dispatch received today by Swedish Minister Ekengren from the foreign minister at Stockholm.

same end. I recall an occasion when two bills, introduced by two different members, amendatory of the same section of the statute, were both passed by the legislature and signed by the governor. Afterwards a serious controversy arose as to which one of these was, in fact, the law.

It is a common complaint that legislative enactments are difficult to understand. The reason for this is because bills are too frequently framed by men who not only have no knowledge of the technical verbiage in which they should be clothed, but who are unskilled in the use of the English language. This assertion is not intended as a reflection upon the mental attainments of the membership of the present or of past legislatures, for I believe I am safe in saying a very large proportion of the measures introduced at every session are drafted by nonmembers. In fact I am of the opinion that almost all bills are prepared by members of the legal profession. I regret to say their work is too frequently, hastily and unskillfully done. The time, not only of the standing committees, but of the committee of the whole, is taken up, to a far greater extent than it should be, in consideration of the substances of proposed laws, but of their construction.

same end. I recall an occasion when two bills, introduced by two different members, amendatory of the same section of the statute, were both passed by the legislature and signed by the governor. Afterwards a serious controversy arose as to which one of these was, in fact, the law.

It is a common complaint that legislative enactments are difficult to understand. The reason for this is because bills are too frequently framed by men who not only have no knowledge of the technical verbiage in which they should be clothed, but who are unskilled in the use of the English language. This assertion is not intended as a reflection upon the mental attainments of the membership of the present or of past legislatures, for I believe I am safe in saying a very large proportion of the measures introduced at every session are drafted by nonmembers. In fact I am of the opinion that almost all bills are prepared by members of the legal profession. I regret to say their work is too frequently, hastily and unskillfully done. The time, not only of the standing committees, but of the committee of the whole, is taken up, to a far greater extent than it should be, in consideration of the substances of proposed laws, but of their construction.

The correction of clerical, grammatical and rhetorical errors is essential, but the time of the members of the legislature should not be so largely consumed in making them. As an illustration of the absurdities to which some of the blunders lead, a bill was enacted into law a few years ago which prohibited the shooting, during certain seasons of Irish "peasants."

Troubles Easily Remedied. Everyone who has