

WOMAN'S SECTION OF THE BEE

What we call life is a condition of the soul, and the soul must improve in happiness and wisdom except by its own fault.—E. B. Browning.

Yes, I know what I have said of the difficulties in your way, but I have faith to believe that, if God has given you a peculiar talent, God will aid you to find a way properly to exercise that talent.—Clara Morris.

SOCIETY

Majority Prevails

By Emily Dickinson.
Much madness is divinest sense
To a discerning eye;
Much sense the starkest madness.
'Tis the majority
In this, as all prevails.
Assent, and you are sane;
Demur—you're straightway dangerous,
And handled with a chain.

Little Girl Receives a Letter from General John Pershing

One little Omaha maid is very happy over a letter from across the sea, from none other than the leader of our armies, Gen. John G. Pershing. Little Miss Maxine Reichenberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Reichenberg, wrote to the general expressing her gratitude for his great service.
Her delight knew no bounds when she received an official looking message with the general's stamp in one corner and opening it she found a short note of thanks for her good wishes and a very hearty wish for a merry Christmas for her and her little friends. This treasured letter is now being shown to Maxine's friends, and it will be one of her most cherished possessions.

Bronze Will Be Fashionable

By GERTRUDE BERESFORD.

Bronze will be a leading spring shade. Bronze charmeuse, meteor and tricoulette are the most beautiful fabrics for spring dresses in this color. The trimming of these gowns, which for the most part are strikingly simple in line, will be embroidery in wool silk floss in rather bold conventional patterns. Motifs of bronze beads with sometimes an embroidery of steel beads are also much used on bronze gowns. This color is usually worn with hats to match, though it is charming with old blue and black. Bronze slippers with bronze buckles and bronze silk stockings are attractive accessories to these costumes. A striking bronze charmeuse dress is illustrated in this straight-line model. It possesses the advantage of being simple in line, and therefore easy to make at home or by the moderately skilled dressmaker. The skirt is slightly draped. A broad, picturesque hat of bronze straw is worn with this gown.

Stews of All Nations

The American woman was formerly too fond of ease and quickness in cooking meats—or else she was not as clever as the cooks of other nations; at any rate she has never produced the savory stews that have graced the tables of other nations. However, we are learning, through necessity and the fireless cooker, to make really delicious stews.

Principles of Making a Stew.

A stew is a method of cooking meat, that is usually tough, in such a manner as to partly retain and partly extract the meat juices. If too much of the juices is extracted, the gravy will be excellent but the meat will be more like soup meat. Hence hot water is always used for stews and the meat is generally dredged with flour and seared before the water is added.

To have a rich gravy, water just sufficient to cover is used and at the end this liquid may be cooked down or thickened with flour.
It is impossible to have a savory stew with less than two hours' cooking unless the meat is cut into very small cubes. Three hours' cooking is even better than two.

In the recipes below, special meats or poultry are called for, but it is perfectly possible to substitute at will—thus beef for mutton, or veal for chicken, etc.

Mulligan.

(A delight of all campers.)
Cook small cubes of meat in hot water till nearly tender or use pieces of cooked meat. Add any and all sorts of raw vegetables diced and cook till tender, then add cooked vegetables such as peas, string beans, etc., and seasoning. The secret of a successful Mulligan is many kinds of vegetables and a rich gravy cooked down at the end if necessary.

Mexican Stew.

2-lb. veal stew, cut 1/2 c. stewed tomatoes
1 onion, sliced 1 c. canned corn
2 T. drippings 1 T. minced parsley
1 c. lima beans Hot water, salt and 2 soaked overnight, pepper
2 potatoes, sliced
Fry the veal and onions in the drippings, add the soaked beans and hot water to cover. Cook gently 2 1/2 hours. Add other ingredients in the last half hour of cooking. Season highly.

Spanish Chicken.

1 chicken, cut into 1/2 green pepper, cut pieces into pieces
1 c. tomatoes 1/2 c. rice
2 onions, sliced Salt
Brown the chicken, onion and green pepper in the drippings, then cover with the tomatoes and add hot water if necessary. Cook gently 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 hours, depending on the age of the chicken. Add the rice the last half hour of cooking.

Serbian Stew.

3-lb. lean salt pork, 3 pimientos sliced
5 c. rice 1/2 c. rice
5 onions, sliced Hot water, salt and 2-lb. brown onion, cut into pepper pieces
Brown onions with pork, then add meat and pimientos, and water to

Bohemian Stewed Beef.

Cover. Cook as usual, adding rice as for Spanish chicken.
2-lb. beef, pounded 1 bay leaf
Salt Several whole peppers
Stock or hot water Allspice
1 onion, sliced Cloves
1 carrot, sliced
1 T. butter
1 T. flour
1 T. sugar
broiled together
2 c. hot water of stock from meat
Cover the beef with vinegar and let stand 24 hours. The next day cook the meat with all the ingredients except the butter, flour, sugar and hot stock. When the meat is done, make a brown gravy of these last ingredients and serve the meat in this gravy.

Queen Helena, who is acting the part of hostess to the president and Mrs. Wilson during their stay in Rome, is essentially a home-loving woman, with little taste for the social side of court life. However, she cannot be reproached with bourgeois tastes, for when the occasion arises she presents a bearing not to be excelled in the most fastidious courts, and it has been said that she surpasses in majesty of carriage any other sovereign in Europe.

Joy Higgins' Lectures Are Being Recognized in New York City

"Our Blighty, Too," is the leading item of the New York Tribune on "Britain Day" to an article written by an Omaha woman, Joy Montgomery Higgins. Miss Higgins, who went abroad with the Gompers labor mission to study industrial conditions in the warring countries last year, is now lecturing on reconstruction work in New York. Her story follows:
"These Britishers tell us to make this our Blighty, too," wrote a young American soldier who had received his training in one of our camps in England and was being nursed back to health in an English hospital. He had given his good right arm in France, but he wasn't thinking about that; rather, he was dreamily musing with a poet's vision on the unbloody side of his great adventure.
"I like this Blighty," he wrote; "she is like a grandmother, old and tiny and trim, her face, bonnet in order. The names of towns and streets all seem to echo some childhood rhyme. It comes over one that this is not a strange country at all—why, it is the home of Mother Goose! Somehow it makes a grown fellow feel like a child again—it's getting back to the nursery!"
Getting back to the nursery! The old familiar names! In this day of tales of blood and devastation, and what a sweet journey to travel through the imaginative land through the faraway scenes of Mother Goose, the realms of youth's song and story! Those loved spots, which, in fancy, our infancy knew.
Here is Islington! And who was it came from Islington Oh, yes, it was Tom, Tom, remembered for his brief wedded bliss, having 10th married and buried his wife on Sunday. And Gotham of the Three Wise Men. Norridge—for which the Man in the Moon so earnestly sought. Banbury, with its vision of the Little Lady on the white horse, she of the ringed fingers and tingling bells. Charing Cross and Shrewsbury Cross, where the little cock horse used to take us with such wondrous facility. And what would not be "sent to Coventry" if for no other reason than to dry the tears of the beautiful Lady Godiva, or to take a peep at Peeping Tom? How gladly we'd give "two sticks and an apple" to hear the bells of Whitechapel; yes, and "halfpence and farthings," would they but ring the bells of St. Martin's. In what old village would maid's few that the Little Boy who lived by himself was forced to go to London to buy himself a wife? Through what quaint town, see Willie Winkie, did you run up and down? From just where in this land of their birth came Old King Cole, the Queen of Hearts, Jack Horner, Simple Simon, Little Bo Peep and many more of that company with which we mingled in the days when soldiers were made of tin and swords or cardboard?
With what a sense of familiarity—the haunting familiarity of race memory, or childhood's imagination—did the American soldier lad look on the scenes of Britain when he could write "it is like getting back to the nursery!" That is a strong call! England's primrose fields Scotland's heathered hills, the wild green hedges of Erin! And old familiar names must have awakened memories beyond the nursery, memories of daughter deeds than were ever recorded of Mary Morey or her illustrious brother.

daughter, Helen. Pink roses and shaded lights made the table most attractive, and covers were laid for the following guests:
Misses—Nellie Ford, Hazel Rasmussen, Maxine Rathenburg, Rena Zaly, Alice Horn, Frances Hendricksen.
Informal Dinner.
Mr. and Mrs. N. Weisman entertained informally at dinner at their home on Sunday evening, for Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Arnold, whose wedding took place last week. Covers were laid for 10 guests.
