Punctuality is the Cry of Club Women as Their Patience Wanes

Oh, for punctuality, the club women cry! The annoyance of peo-ple coming late is beginning to fray the nerves of many who attend the lectures and meetings of the various organizations, for in the disturbance the opening words of the speaker

Mme, Galli-Curci set the prece-dent, for the doors were closed promptly on the hour, and sa a result everyone was on time. When the hands of the clock begin to turn toward the dinner-hour there is a visible restlessness among the fem-inine members of the audience, we have noticed when attending club meetings. This might be avoided if the women arrived on the hour for the sessions would be concluded

The particular work of this department is to see how many, if any, girls are being let out on account of the re-turn of the men who have been in the army.

In each and every case the firm stated that the men would be taken back. They also stated that in would be able to retain all the women engaged, as well as take back all the men.

My dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I am in love with a girl, but she is three years younger than me.
Do you think that would make any difference? I know she is also in love with me, and I want to say something on the subject of painted up doils. I have had experience with them all, but there is, I want to say, nothing like the plain, good, motherly lady, and I wouldn't have any other kind than a plain, motherly woman for a wife. I wish you would find out who the young lady is and send me her address and maybe I can give her some information. Please do not put my name in print, but just my initials, and if you can find who the lady is you can write to me personally. H. M.

An Opinion.

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omnha Bee:
May I be admitted in this discussion. Tony, you point was well raised and must say, I, too, have known some "painted dolis" that were big of heart and made good wives and mothers, but I think you were mistaken as to to C. O. A.'s meaning. I don't believe he would marry an angel on a bet and don't think he meant that at all.

I agree with him, and the sooner girls learn not to paint the better off they will be, for paint and rouge have been considered by men since time was as evil or a sign of evil.

Constant reader.

Your parents should not try to "sell" you. Marrying for money is about the most miserable bargain a girl can make. You are young. Why not wait a couple of years and see if the man you love doesn't prove himself capable of supporting a family.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a constant reader of The Omaha Bee and also of your columns of advice. What is good for greasy hair? I wash my hair once a week but in

I agree with him, and the sooner girls learn not to paint the better off they will be, for paint and rouge have been considered by men since time was as evil or a sign of evil, and if we choose the appearance of evil we must not complain if the men folks think evil of us.

JUST A PAL.

Brand New Opinion. Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: As I am an interested reader of your "Advice to the Lovelorn," I will write you concerning the will write you concerning the "painted up doll." I am a burnette, with very red lips, so, of course, I do not use paint, but there are many girls who are so unfortunate many girls who are so unfortunate as to have very pale, thin lips; in fact, there are as many who haven't as there are who have. I think that a little paint will give such a person a much more attractive look, as it helps to show a younger and happier face. Although I admit that many girls carry painting to the extreme, many of them are young and do not stop to think what too much paint does to spoil the effect. Older girls in most cases who use it know more about how to use it. Is there nothing that men carry to extremes? Are they perfect? I Must say in regard to "Tony's" letter that I don't agree with him. We are not to judge others, but we all have our own opinions and gen-erally live up to what we think is right.

But where would the younger generation of girls be if we upheld the "painted beauties."

We wouldn't have so many "downfalls" today if girls would dress and act according to "mother's" advice. But it's to attract the attention of men, some very undesirable ones, sometimes, that girls paint their faces.

But for my part, when I choose paint their faces.

But for my part, when I choose a husband I certainly don't want one that is addicted to the habit of chasing "painted beauties," because the habit might have become permanent.
