

GERMANS EAGER TO GO INTO ONCE HATED U.S. ARMY

Strange Attitude Toward Peace is Shown by Many People in Conquered Country.

By H. J. GREENWALL. (Exclusive Cable by Universal Service and the London Daily Express.)

Berlin, Jan. 21.—The mental attitude of the Germans toward peace is just as strange as their attitude towards the war. There are now hundreds of thousands in Berlin alone planning to go to England and America as soon as the boats resume service.

Many seem to go as commission agents to get into direct touch with firms having raw material for sale to Germany.

Another naive class assumes that everything is forgotten. One German said to me:

"Send to Paris and get me a rain coat like yours."

The most amazing class is that of the officers. Almost directly after the Rhine districts had been occupied by the Americans, the latter were overwhelmed with requests from former German officers to allow them to join the American army. Then they tried the Japanese, English and French armies. Their impatient requests were turned down of course. One allied mission got so many requests that it printed special forms of refusal which were sent out by the hundreds.

NOT A PARTICLE OF DANDRUFF OR A FALLING HAIR

Save Your Hair! Double Its Beauty in Just a Few Moments.

"Dandervine" Makes Your Hair Thick, Glossy, Wavy and Beautiful.

Within 10 minutes after an application of Dandervine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

Dandervine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

A little Dandervine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and straggly, just moisten a cloth with Dandervine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Dandervine from any drug store or toilet counter for a few cents and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that all you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Dandervine.—Adv.

MADE TO ORDER

There's No "Dull Season"—with Nicoll

We keep our best tailors active, between seasons, by adding an extra pair of Trousers to your suit order, for the price of the suit alone.

FOR the hard wear which a business suit must withstand there are no materials so satisfactory as the Worsteds, Cheviots and Tweeds we are showing in new colorings and weaves.

You'll be wishing for new clothes soon—why not order them today?

SUIT AND EXTRA TROUSERS $35, $40, $45 and up
Nicoll Tailoring has special attraction for the man who wants to be well turned out at nominal cost.

NICOLL The Tailor
Wm. Jerrems' Sons
209-211—So. 15th Street—Karbach Block

"VIRTUOUS WIVES"

(Copyright, 1918, by Little, Brown & Co.)

CHAPTER II.

Well after 9 o'clock, little Mrs. Forrester awoke with a start, as she had done each morning of the two weeks in her new surroundings, with a feeling of being lost in some strange land. For a moment, still caught in a passing dream, it seemed to her that she was turning in the perfumed crush of one of the brilliant balls which had crowded her last year's appearance in society.

"I must be dreaming," she said to herself, with an effort. "That can't be. I know very well that I am in my little blue room and old Hannah is coming in with the coffee and the roses. That's it. I'm waking up."

Smiling to herself, she succeeded in half opening her eyes. But instead of the mahogany footboards and the casement window with red curtains nodding across the gray thread of the far-off Hudson, she beheld something draped and lacy above her head, and then, through the diluted shadows of the Louis XVI. bedroom, a shining dressing table weighted down with silver, a white-and-gold chaise longue, while from a corner, hazily giving back her own image in the canopied pangled bed, a cheval glass grew from the floor to the ceiling of the soft pink room. She had again an acute feeling of strangeness. But all at once she began to laugh.

"Oh, yes—I'm married, and I must get up in time to breakfast with Andrew." At this moment, her glance encountered the accusing face of a jeweled clock. "Half-past nine! Oh dear, I never seem to get up, and I ought to—it's—it's my duty. I must—tomorrow. Poor, dear boy, it's so lonely! If I telephoned him—"

"A little hand groped for the receiver and stopped. 'No, no—too sentimental. Amy! He won't say anything, but he won't like it. That horrid business! Oh, dear, I must grow up!'"

To grow up and to get up were two ideas hopelessly entangled in her foggy mind. She rang for her maid and went off into dreams, wherein were strangely mingled rapid nights of social pleasures and memories of sheltered home of her childhood, where everything had revolved about her, where her father, Judge Sparling, and her uncle Tom carried her around on their shoulders as though determined that she should never grow up. She was not yet 21. She had made her debut in society the year before, and her abrupt marriage to Andrew Forrester the summer after a frantic season, which had left her a few illusions and a part of her health.

She had seen no one in the deserted city, and the isolation had weighed heavily. She was looking forward to her entrance into the younger married set with a little apprehension and much pleasant excitement because she knew she had nothing to fear.

There was about this invitation, moreover, a side which she had not quite divulged to her husband. When Mr. Dellabarre had stopped to speak to them in a restaurant, she was then so overwhelmed with loneliness that she had instinctively put herself out to a little more than please. When the invitation had arrived, three days later, she had experienced a sudden return of that intoxicating sense of power which she had felt so often in the year of her debut whenever she had come victoriously into public dance.

"Never mind the eggs, Morley—just heat up the coffee," she said apologetically, as she slipped a tiny foot into the fur slipper and felt the luxurious warmth of her eider-down peignoir—Andrew's gift—close over her shoulders.

This bourgeois consideration for the chef shocked Morley.

"Not at all, madam; the eggs and coffee are quite spoiled," she said, and departed with dignity for a new breakfast.

Back from her bath, indolently installed in the deep cushion of the chaise longue, Amy Forrester began the perusal of her morning mail, while Morley arranged the second breakfast. There were letters from schoolgirl chums, debutsantes of last year, with highly colored descriptions of their eager ventures into the painted gardens of society. She smiled over their extravagances, and smiled, too, at herself, wondering if their vision or herself were the more unreal—a child installed over three servants and a chauffeur—and, of course, the destinies of a husband. For, sometimes in the reveries of the day, she awoke with a start and asked herself how it all had happened.

"Amy, it's Fifi!" She gave a cry of delight at the sound of her cousin's voice.

"How wonderful—you darling! Where are you? What are you doing?"

"Down to shop. Crazy to see what you look like. How's married life? May I peek in on you?"

"I may. In half an hour—gorgeous! So long!"

"What did we do last night?" said Amy to herself, rising reluctantly. She remembered that they had gone to the theater and then to a roof garden to dance until after 2. "Tonight early to bed," she said, with a touch of remorse. "I've kept him up every night this week, and Andrew must work."

All at once, she recalled with delight the invitation to the Dellabarres. In the fortnight since their return, she had seen no one in the deserted city, and the isolation had weighed heavily. She was looking forward to her entrance into the younger married set with a little apprehension and much pleasant excitement because she knew she had nothing to fear.

There was about this invitation, moreover, a side which she had not quite divulged to her husband. When Mr. Dellabarre had stopped to speak to them in a restaurant, she was then so overwhelmed with loneliness that she had instinctively put herself out to a little more than please. When the invitation had arrived, three days later, she had experienced a sudden return of that intoxicating sense of power which she had felt so often in the year of her debut whenever she had come victoriously into public dance.

"Never mind the eggs, Morley—just heat up the coffee," she said apologetically, as she slipped a tiny foot into the fur slipper and felt the luxurious warmth of her eider-down peignoir—Andrew's gift—close over her shoulders.

Mr. Dellabarre had stopped to speak to them in a restaurant, she was then so overwhelmed with loneliness that she had instinctively put herself out to a little more than please. When the invitation had arrived, three days later, she had experienced a sudden return of that intoxicating sense of power which she had felt so often in the year of her debut whenever she had come victoriously into public dance.

"Never mind the eggs, Morley—just heat up the coffee," she said apologetically, as she slipped a tiny foot into the fur slipper and felt the luxurious warmth of her eider-down peignoir—Andrew's gift—close over her shoulders.

This bourgeois consideration for the chef shocked Morley.

"Not at all, madam; the eggs and coffee are quite spoiled," she said, and departed with dignity for a new breakfast.

Back from her bath, indolently installed in the deep cushion of the chaise longue, Amy Forrester began the perusal of her morning mail, while Morley arranged the second breakfast. There were letters from schoolgirl chums, debutsantes of last year, with highly colored descriptions of their eager ventures into the painted gardens of society. She smiled over their extravagances, and smiled, too, at herself, wondering if their vision or herself were the more unreal—a child installed over three servants and a chauffeur—and, of course, the destinies of a husband. For, sometimes in the reveries of the day, she awoke with a start and asked herself how it all had happened.

"Amy, it's Fifi!" She gave a cry of delight at the sound of her cousin's voice.

"How wonderful—you darling! Where are you? What are you doing?"

"Down to shop. Crazy to see what you look like. How's married life? May I peek in on you?"

"I may. In half an hour—gorgeous! So long!"

"What did we do last night?" said Amy to herself, rising reluctantly. She remembered that they had gone to the theater and then to a roof garden to dance until after 2. "Tonight early to bed," she said, with a touch of remorse. "I've kept him up every night this week, and Andrew must work."

All at once, she recalled with delight the invitation to the Dellabarres. In the fortnight since their return, she had seen no one in the deserted city, and the isolation had weighed heavily. She was looking forward to her entrance into the younger married set with a little apprehension and much pleasant excitement because she knew she had nothing to fear.

There was about this invitation, moreover, a side which she had not quite divulged to her husband. When Mr. Dellabarre had stopped to speak to them in a restaurant, she was then so overwhelmed with loneliness that she had instinctively put herself out to a little more than please. When the invitation had arrived, three days later, she had experienced a sudden return of that intoxicating sense of power which she had felt so often in the year of her debut whenever she had come victoriously into public dance.

"Never mind the eggs, Morley—just heat up the coffee," she said apologetically, as she slipped a tiny foot into the fur slipper and felt the luxurious warmth of her eider-down peignoir—Andrew's gift—close over her shoulders.

This bourgeois consideration for the chef shocked Morley.

"Not at all, madam; the eggs and coffee are quite spoiled," she said, and departed with dignity for a new breakfast.

Back from her bath, indolently installed in the deep cushion of the chaise longue, Amy Forrester began the perusal of her morning mail, while Morley arranged the second breakfast. There were letters from schoolgirl chums, debutsantes of last year, with highly colored descriptions of their eager ventures into the painted gardens of society. She smiled over their extravagances, and smiled, too, at herself, wondering if their vision or herself were the more unreal—a child installed over three servants and a chauffeur—and, of course, the destinies of a husband. For, sometimes in the reveries of the day, she awoke with a start and asked herself how it all had happened.

"Amy, it's Fifi!" She gave a cry of delight at the sound of her cousin's voice.

"How wonderful—you darling! Where are you? What are you doing?"

"Down to shop. Crazy to see what you look like. How's married life? May I peek in on you?"

"I may. In half an hour—gorgeous! So long!"

"What did we do last night?" said Amy to herself, rising reluctantly. She remembered that they had gone to the theater and then to a roof garden to dance until after 2. "Tonight early to bed," she said, with a touch of remorse. "I've kept him up every night this week, and Andrew must work."

All at once, she recalled with delight the invitation to the Dellabarres. In the fortnight since their return, she had seen no one in the deserted city, and the isolation had weighed heavily. She was looking forward to her entrance into the younger married set with a little apprehension and much pleasant excitement because she knew she had nothing to fear.

There was about this invitation, moreover, a side which she had not quite divulged to her husband. When Mr. Dellabarre had stopped to speak to them in a restaurant, she was then so overwhelmed with loneliness that she had instinctively put herself out to a little more than please. When the invitation had arrived, three days later, she had experienced a sudden return of that intoxicating sense of power which she had felt so often in the year of her debut whenever she had come victoriously into public dance.

"Never mind the eggs, Morley—just heat up the coffee," she said apologetically, as she slipped a tiny foot into the fur slipper and felt the luxurious warmth of her eider-down peignoir—Andrew's gift—close over her shoulders.

This bourgeois consideration for the chef shocked Morley.

"Not at all, madam; the eggs and coffee are quite spoiled," she said, and departed with dignity for a new breakfast.

Back from her bath, indolently installed in the deep cushion of the chaise longue, Amy Forrester began the perusal of her morning mail, while Morley arranged the second breakfast. There were letters from schoolgirl chums, debutsantes of last year, with highly colored descriptions of their eager ventures into the painted gardens of society. She smiled over their extravagances, and smiled, too, at herself, wondering if their vision or herself were the more unreal—a child installed over three servants and a chauffeur—and, of course, the destinies of a husband. For, sometimes in the reveries of the day, she awoke with a start and asked herself how it all had happened.

"Amy, it's Fifi!" She gave a cry of delight at the sound of her cousin's voice.

"How wonderful—you darling! Where are you? What are you doing?"

"Down to shop. Crazy to see what you look like. How's married life? May I peek in on you?"

"I may. In half an hour—gorgeous! So long!"

"What did we do last night?" said Amy to herself, rising reluctantly. She remembered that they had gone to the theater and then to a roof garden to dance until after 2. "Tonight early to bed," she said, with a touch of remorse. "I've kept him up every night this week, and Andrew must work."

All at once, she recalled with delight the invitation to the Dellabarres. In the fortnight since their return, she had seen no one in the deserted city, and the isolation had weighed heavily. She was looking forward to her entrance into the younger married set with a little apprehension and much pleasant excitement because she knew she had nothing to fear.

There was about this invitation, moreover, a side which she had not quite divulged to her husband. When Mr. Dellabarre had stopped to speak to them in a restaurant, she was then so overwhelmed with loneliness that she had instinctively put herself out to a little more than please. When the invitation had arrived, three days later, she had experienced a sudden return of that intoxicating sense of power which she had felt so often in the year of her debut whenever she had come victoriously into public dance.

"Never mind the eggs, Morley—just heat up the coffee," she said apologetically, as she slipped a tiny foot into the fur slipper and felt the luxurious warmth of her eider-down peignoir—Andrew's gift—close over her shoulders.

TWO NEBRASKA WOMEN TO SAIL OVERSEAS SOON

Miss Ena Hamot of Hastings and Miss Margaret Covey of St. Paul Selected.

Two Nebraska women, Miss Ena Hamot of Hastings and Miss Margaret Covey of St. Paul, have been named to sail January 29 with the General Federation of Women's clubs unit for overseas service in furlough areas. Miss Josephine Starratt of Central City and Miss Myrtle Judd of Rising City are alternates.

The choice was made at a board meeting of the Nebraska Federated Club Women held in Lincoln December 11. The sailing date may have to be postponed in order to permit the club women a short period of training in New York.

Community work will hold the interest of club women now that the war work is practically over, according to Mrs. Addison E. Sheldon of Lincoln, state president.

"As soon as the 'flu' ban is lifted in other parts of the state, club women will enter upon their work with renewed interest. Child welfare will occupy a great portion of their efforts," Mrs. Sheldon said.

Dundee Has So Many Children It Does Not Know What to Do

There is no race suicide in Dundee. This section of Omaha, although it is inhabited by the well-to-do, has so many children that like "the old woman who lived in a shoe," they "don't know what to do."

Dundee school is too small to accommodate all the little codgers. They have been going to school on double shifts, half going in the morning and half in the afternoon. Now they have had to turn the teachers' rest room into a school room even under the double shift schedule. When Dundee school was built a few years ago it was considered big enough for many years.

Bankers' Reserve Life Re-Elects All Officers

At the annual meeting of the directors of The Bankers Reserve Life Insurance Co., just held, executive officers were re-elected as follows: Robert L. Robinson, president; Walter G. Preston, vice president; James R. Farney, vice president; Ray C. Wagner, secretary and treasurer; E. L. Dunn, assistant secretary. Messrs. Farney and Wagner were re-elected as directors of the company. Secretary Wagner reported total assets of $8,159,623.30 with a net legal reserve to secure policyholders, $6,379,281.00. Total business in force $43,556,627.00. The secretary reported also an extraordinary increase of business every month of the year, there being an excess every month over the corresponding month of previous years. The company is expanding its business largely throughout twenty-five western states, and is planning to achieve larger results during the new year.

Accounting Asked of Gate City Hay and Grain Co.

James C. Martnett has filed a petition in equity in district court alleging that Sterling M. Guy M., and Walter J. Palling have not made a proper disposition and accounting of the funds of the Gate City Hay and Grain company.

The plaintiff alleges that Sterling M. Palling appropriated to his individual use more than $25,000 which rightfully belonged to the partnership, and it is further alleged that Palling speculated with and lost money which should have been accounted for in the company's books. Martnett has asked the court to require defendants to make a showing, to render a judgment in favor of himself and to dissolve the partnership.

Saunders School Now Has New Form of Examination

The pupils in the Eighth A grade at Saunders school, at Forty-first and Cass, have completed a course of study in commercial geography, and in place of the formal examination Miss Mary A. Reed, the principal, and Miss Ella Knight, the teacher of commercial geography, invited Arthur Thomas of the bureau of publicity, to visit the school in the guise of a business man who was contemplating locating in the middle west. A number of the children then proceeded to convince him that he should locate in Omaha. Each pupil took a different subject and succeeded in putting up a stiff argument.

Indicted on Treason Charge.

New York, Jan. 21.—John T. Ryan, a Buffalo lawyer, long wanted by the federal authorities in connection with the alleged treasonable activities of Jeremiah O'Leary and a number of Germans, today was indicted for treason by the federal grand jury.

In the Divorce Court.

Amanda S. Holman has applied in district court for a divorce from Edgar F. Holman alleging that she has suffered physical and mental anguish. She asks a award of $1,000 alimony and custody of two children.

Flora Wright charges her husband, George, with abandonment. They were married in Omaha, February 3, 1918. She asks for a decree of divorce.

Mary Mentian charges Valerie Munton with desertion. In a petition which has been filed she asks for a decree of custody of child and a reasonable allowance.

Edwin Blair has been ordered to pay $10 per month for support of his children pending a divorce action filed by his wife, Violet.

Maudie A. Moore has been allowed a decree of divorce from Robert C. Moore, a body of an infant son, and an allowance of $40 per month. The husband did not contest the action.

Alphata O. Fick has been granted a decree of divorce from Frederick W. Fink, also custody of a child, and a weekly allowance of $1.50 and alimony of $10.

One Minute Store Talk

A returning soldier said: "You folks have the right idea of a 'Welcome-Home' to the army and navy—there's nothing that a soldier wants so much as good 'civies' at low prices right now, and you've got what we want—the boys are praising you to a man."

We're glad to be in a position to do something really worth while for returning soldiers.

This Sale proves it!

"Mr. Business Man"

Here's a Great Opportunity for You!

SUPERB SATIN LINED

Chesterfield Overcoats

In all sizes 36 to 52, with a great range of extra large sizes, stouts and longs, 42 to 52 chest, included in the sale of the hour, because I must

CLEAN HOUSE

The materials include Warumbo Meltons, St. George Kerseys, Boucles, Twilled and Plain Hocoanums, Oxford and Black Vicunas, Velvet or self collars. Satin or serge lined. Never a better opportunity to secure a finely tailored, high-class Chesterfield overcoat at a generous reduction. Pick up one of these snaps Wednesday. Your size may be gone Thursday.

Every wanted overcoat style in the sale—ulsters, ulsterettes, great coats, dress coats, all broken lines. Hundreds suits and overcoats on sale Wednesday:

$10.00 Men's Suits going at $6.75	$35.00 Suits and Overcoats, $23.75
$15.00 Suits and Overcoats, $10.00	$40.00 Suits and Overcoats, $26.75
$20.00 Suits and Overcoats, $13.75	$45.00 Suits and Overcoats, $30.00
$25.00 Suits and Overcoats, $16.75	$50.00 Suits and Overcoats, $35.00
$30.00 Suits and Overcoats, $20.00	$55.00 Suits and Overcoats, $37.50

$80.00 Suits and Overcoats, $40.00

$65.00 Finest Overcoats at $50.00

$70.00 Finest Overcoats at $47.50

$75.00 Finest Overcoats at $50.00

$85.00 Finest Overcoats at $57.50

MANY RARE BARGAINS IN MEN'S UNION SUITS, MEN'S SHIRTS, WOOL SWEATERS, FLANNEL SHIRTS, SILK NECKWEAR

SEE OUR WINDOWS TODAY.

Nebraska Clothing Co.

CORRECT APPAREL FOR MEN AND WOMEN

COMPARE OUR VALUES ALWAYS.

don't wait any longer take advantage of the wonderful shoe values offered by the—

Walk-Over BOOT SHOP

There's no time like the present and the quality of the Shoes placed on sale during their

January Shoe Clearance

are all of the high-standard made by this world-known firm. Every shoe reduced—every pair a bargain.

Look at These Two Specials

Lot No. 1—500 pairs Women's lace shoes—patent, tan and black calf and calf calf—values up to $6	Lot No. 2—500 pairs Men's and Women's button and lace shoes—patent, tan and black calf in Men's—patent, tan, black and color in Women's—values up to $10.
January sale price, $1.95 per pair for.....	January sale price, $3.95 per pair.....

Largest Assortment of Phoenix Hosiery in the city. All sizes—All colors.

WALK-OVER BOOT SHOP
317 So. 16th St.

Why not Drink the Best?

Why not?

When Writing to Our Advertisers Mention Seeing It in THE BEE.

DROWSY, LANGUID, DON'T HAVE GRAY HAIR

Dr. King's New Discovery Restores the Alertness of Yesterday.

That "all in" feeling that accompanies a heavy cold and ceaseless cough is replaced by one of restful repose and gratifying relief when you use Dr. King's New Discovery.

Feverish flushes, phlegm congestion, mild bronchitis, croupy coughs, short-order. Fifty years of easing cold and cough pain have made it known nationally. Sold for 50 years. All druggists. 60c and $1.20.

The Poisons of Constipation are gently, but positively, expelled from the suffering system by Dr. King's New Life Pills. Dizziness, disappears, sick headache vanishes, the digestion perks up, general health improves. Your druggist has them, same as always.—Adv.

No Use to Have Gray Hair and Look Old When You Can so Easily Darken Your Gray Hair With "La Creole"

How many times have you stood before a mirror and wished your hair would be beautiful, dark and lustrous like the young folks you see, instead of being dull, gray, streaked and faded, as well as thin or falling. Don't envy them. You can have beautiful, evenly dark, lustrous, long, thick hair, too, with a trace of gray. Just get a bottle of "La Creole" Hair Dressing, the wonderful hair color restorer, and comb it into your hair as per simple directions on the bottle. In a few weeks that ugly, faded, lifeless gray hair will turn to that beautiful, even dark shade you used to have, and when you run your fingers through your hair and feel how soft and lustrous it is, too, you will wear a smile of real delight. Thousands of enthusiastic users praise "La Creole" Hair Dressing as the greatest hair color restorer. It is absolutely harmless and can easily be applied in the privacy of your room. For sale by Sherman & McConell Drug Stores and all good drug stores everywhere. Mail orders promptly filled upon receipt of regular price, $1.00. "La Creole" Hair Dressing is guaranteed.—Adv.

Watch for The Bee's

ROTOGRAVURE SECTION

Next Sunday

"For six years we have used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in our family and feel we could not possibly do without it, especially for the children." (From a letter to Dr. Caldwell written by Mrs. Earl Cowell, Cement City, Mich.)

Children become constipated as readily as do their elders, and the result is equally distressing. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is ideal for children because of its pleasant taste, positive, yet gentle, action, and its freedom from opiates and narcotic drugs

DR. CALDWELL'S Syrup Pepsin

The Perfect Laxative

Sold by Druggists Everywhere

50 cts. (1/2) $1.00

A TRIAL BOTTLE CAN BE OBTAINED, FREE OF CHARGE, BY WRITING TO DR. W. B. CALDWELL, 459 WASHINGTON STREET, MONTICELLO, ILLINOIS