

SAYS ILLEGAL LIQUOR SALE GROWS IN STATE

Members of House Hold Heated Discussion on Methods Employed to Fight Bootlegging Over Nebraska.

(By Staff Correspondent.) Lincoln, Feb. 10.—(Special.)—In Nebraska is growing to an appalling extent and in the eastern part of the state, especially in Nemaha county, it amounts to open violation of the law.

This was the statement made on the floor of the house by Representative Good of Nemaha, chairman of the finance committee, in a debate precipitated by Anderson of Hamilton, who asked that H. R. No. 205, appropriating $25,000 for use of the state bootleggers as an emergency fund, be reconsidered for a specific amendment after it had been recommended for passage by the committee of the whole.

Anderson was asked to explain his motion. He said that he had been asleep at the time when the bill had been submitted to the committee of the whole and had just woken up. He wanted the bill amended so as to make the appropriation $5,000 instead of $25,000 asked by the governor.

How Money Was Spent. Snow and Good insisted at this moment that the rules of the house be enforced and that the bill in question be up for third reading and that there could be no reconsideration except for specific correction. Despite this, discussion of the bill was continued and Jacobson said he was opposed to it or the reason that with the $16,000 left on hand, unexpended by the Neville regime, and with the $25,000 added there would be available for the use of the governor and his bootleg agents $42,000 to be expended at the rate of $14,000 per month, or $500 per day for the period ending March 31 of the present year.

Jacobson also contended that Gus Hyers, at the head of the prohibitory enforcement machinery, was not the proper man to expend the money. "On January 1, it was shown, he was short $2,091 to Lancaster county for the term in which he served as sheriff.

"Point of order," "Point of order!" yelled several members of the house at once.

Jarys Has Answer. "Let him go," said Jarys of Lancaster. "I want to answer him." "Part of this money is to be used for the paying of rewards by the state agents," continued Jacobson, after the interruption.

Just As Much Booze In the State Now, As at the Time Saloons Were Wide Open

—Governor McKelvie to Lower House.

Governor Reads Special Message to Lower House of Legislature Advocating for the Passage of $25,000 Special Fund for Appointment of Efficient Booze Sleuths.

From a Staff Correspondent. Lincoln, Feb. 10.—(Special.)—In a special message to the lower house of the state legislature today, Gov. S. R. McKelvie stated that there was as much booze in the state when he took office as there was when the state had open saloons. He said that the illegal traffic in liquor has become thoroughly established and booze runners are now covering the state in a systematic and businesslike manner.

More Dangerous Than Saloons. The bootleggers are more dangerous than the open saloon, he said, and the illegal traffic in liquor in the small towns is demoralizing the young men of small communities. He asserted that drinking was encouraged for young men by dealers in the contraband in order to increase their business.

The statement was issued when opponents to the bill asking for an additional $25,000 for the enforcement of the prohibition amendment became active. A fierce fight was waged on the floor of the house over the passage of the measure. The governor explained, in asking for the added appropriation, that he at any time and in any amount to open violation of the law.

Guard Every Bridge. "We want to appropriate enough money to enable the governor to place a guard at every bridge and on every public highway, to quadruple the force of state agents, if necessary, to put a stop to this business. He must have all the money he can give him. We must put a stop to bootlegging."

Jarys, in defense of Hyers, charged on the floor with not having straightened his accounts with Lancaster county, as sheriff, said: "A democratic county attorney and clerk were elected in Lancaster county and they decided to audit the books of all the republican officeholders. They found that Hyers had not accounted for over $2,000 worth of fees, which he felt belonged to him under the law, and for which he was not called on the account. The audit failed to make public Hyers' account, but he had turned into the county treasury fees of a nature that it was not necessary to report."

Bill Still in Air. A ruling was demanded from the chair by Snow and the chair held that the bill could be reconsidered for specific correction.
