New York, Feb. 31 .- Dun's tomorrow

New York, Feb. 21.—Dun's temetrew will say:
While no evidence appears that general business is emerging from its repression indications of importance are now less difficult of discernment. A change for the better in some quarters this week has been mainly one of suntiment, although a gain in actual transactions has also come in those lines where price reductions have been sufficiently drastic to awaken buyers interest, and there is more tangible reason to anticipate ecotomic revival as market deflection continues. That trade recovery is gradual and checkered, with no sign of it even now in various branches, is not unmatural, considering the uncertainties of the period and no departure from the policy of purchasing cauliously and almost a holly for immediate necessities has been witnessed. While a slowing down has occurred since the inauguration of peace-time readustments, the least satisfactory news is still that which comes from largest industrial conters where development of civillan orders has fallen for short of filling the centers where development of civilian orders has fallen far short of filling the gap left by suspension of war activities, and where multiplying unemployment of machinery and labor has resulted.
