English Want German Ships ament. Be Destroyed; Proposition to Go Before Supreme War Council.

Paris, Feb. 22.—(By Associated Press.)—Out of the great number of contradictory statements being published concerning the disposition of German warships, which have been seized, this much may be accepted as a definite official statement: Great Britain insists that these ships be destroyed. — This proposition will be put be-fore the supreme war council as a

She would remove these parts and then destroy the hulls and arm-

The basis of the British admiralty plan, which will be submitted to the supreme council, is that the German ships should not be retained as warships and it is insisted that because of their construction they have no commercial value. no commercial value.

The admiralty decision is said to have been influenced largely by the belief that a satisfactory distribu tion of the ships among the allies was impossible. In fact, it is added, Great Britain would claim a major portion of the ships. This would only serve to increase her preponderance of sea power which, it is held, might be objectionable to other na-
