"There is a motive back of this bill. On St. Mary's avenue we never could get any improvements while the speculators held the reins of government. When we erected buildings there we were told the street was on permanent grade. This bill will give the council power to put a 12-foot fill in front of our property."

W. T. Graham, a real estate man, spoke in favor of the bill.

"If Mrs. Cormack only knew it," he said, "this bill will operate to increase the value of her property, not to degrease it. There is no section of this city that has received improvements and now is sorry that it has them. Improvements are it has them. Improvements are what make property valuable and a city great,"

Ed. A. Smith drew applause when he declared that "a road tax on automobiles should be levied to take care of grading and paving in the city." He also protested against the $500,000 bond issue provided in the bill. Mr. Towl explained that this is merely a "revolving fund" which is used to pay contractors and is replenished by levies for the im-provements when they are paid by the property owners,

Among the other speakers against the bill were Yale Holland and Tony Donahue. Henry Wulf spoke in favor of it.

It was the liveliest meeting the city council chamber has seen in many a year.
