Oh, seem not they are best alone, Whose lives a peaceful tenor keep; The Power who pities man has shown A blessing for the eyes that weep.

How dull it is to pause, to make an end; To rust, unblended, not to shine in use! As tho' the breath were life. —Alfred Tennyson.

"One Heifetz in a Century" and Many Omaha Music Lovers Will Hear Him

"One Heifetz in a century," the critics say and the music lovers marvel at the beauty of his playing for this slender lad of 19 years seems inspired as he draws his bow across the strings. Mrs. George McIntyre, who is spending the winter in Washington, heard Jascha Heifetz some time ago and she says that the audience fairly wept at the magic of the music.

It is gratifying to the musicians that the Tuesday Musical club, who will present Heifetz Monday evening, have secured a theater rather than a large auditorium. So much of the music is lost when one hears a violinist in a large room and many of the prominent musicians are planning to sit near the stage that they may watch the fingering of this boy artist.

Card Parties. The Fidelis club of St. Cecilia's cathedral entertained at cards, Tuesday afternoon in the school auditorium on Thirty-ninth and Webster streets.

Loyal Club. Mrs. Thomas E. Creighton entertained the Loyal club at her home, Wednesday, Mrs. C. B. Roberts was the guest of the club. The members present included:

Prettiest Mile Club Parties. A number of parties were given Tuesday at the Prettiest Mile club, when luncheon was served, followed by cards. The hostesses included: Mesdames Albert Schantz, A. Gesman, B. J. Reavis, Ralph Newell, A. F. Sorenson, J. D. Phelps and Clyde Rock.

For the Future. Misses Ada and Alice Alexander will entertain at luncheon, followed by cards, at the Blackstone Wednesday.

For the Future. Mrs. C. E. Miller will entertain the executive board of the Woman's association of Plymouth Congregational church at luncheon Wednesday, at her home.

Licensed to Wed. William C. Shaffer of Omaha was licensed to wed Miss Ida Ferris of Papillion at Waukegan, Ill., Tuesday.

Helpful Hints. Remove white spots on floors with a cloth moistened with water and a few drops of ammonia. Finish with oil.

Dandruff Surely Destroys The Hair. Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

Miss Irene Langdon Becomes the Bride of Lieutenant Murphy

The attractive chapel of Creighton university was the scene of a pretty wedding Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Miss Irene Langdon, daughter of Mrs. Martin Langdon, and Lt. J. Harry Murphy were united in marriage by Rev. W. P. Whelan.

A wedding supper was served at the Fontenelle for the members of the two families when tiny flags decorated the table. After a short wedding trip Lieutenant Murphy and his bride will be at home at Rockford, Ill.

Soldiers and Nurses Stand in Line Hours to Get Real American Pie

Americans waiting to get into the dining room at the hotel Petrograd, the Y. W. C. A. hostess house in Paris, are roped off into crowds just as at motion picture shows, according to Miss Frieda Hainert of Minneapolis, director of the hotel dining room.

When the crowds became so great that people leaving the dining room could not get to the front door and hotel guests could not get to the office telephone and information desk, this system was adopted. Guests must wait for meals in one of two big saloons now.

With the same floor space and the same equipment the capacity of the dining room has been doubled in the last year, the average number of meals served daily being 850 in place of 425. The largest number served in one day was 1,023—on President Wilson day.

Cellars

Few people realize just how much of a foundation of a house the cellar is. It is there, and that is all that most of us think about it. A Nebraska house without a cellar is a rare sight but in certain parts of the country houses are merely raised on stilts, leaving a free space under the whole house.

Where furnaces are a rarity, the cellar is not so common. It is generally conceded that a good cellar is a decided advantage to a house from the health standpoint; and that the cellar should extend under the whole house. The fact that houses without cellars are raised off the ground to allow circulation of air underneath is an indication that this air space is a good thing.

Essentials of a Healthful House. Whenever and wherever our houses may be, they all should be dry, light, and filled with pure air. The first and last of these points are closely bound up with the cellar. You can't have a dry house with a damp cellar, and it is impossible to have a dry cellar without a dry house.

Pure Air in the Cellar. A house is like a chimney when the house is heated. The warm air tends to rise and seek outlet at the top. Hence the air in our living rooms and bedrooms is the air of our cellars. This is no idle statement for it has been proved by experiment that one-half of the cellar air makes its way into the first story, one-third into the second and one-fifth into the third.

Whitewashing the Cellar. One authority on sanitation suggests that the cellar be thoroughly cleaned every spring and then whitewashed with lime. That practice is not very common, but there is good reason for it. Lime in itself is a good disinfectant so that it helps to free the cellar from any bacteria; and the whitening of the walls not only makes the cellar lighter but unconsciously the owner is stimulated to higher standards of cleanliness by its cleanly appearance.

Canine Actor Rebels. "Thor" is on strike. But the "Thor" concerned is not the Thunderer, the Norse god. This "Thor" is Rupert Julian's mammoth canine. The mastiff was engaged by his master to play a role in "The Fire Eaters," the new Julian starring vehicle which he himself is directing. The Julian role required a beard and the famous director actor procured himself a superb specimen of crepe hair.

But—"Thor" was suspicious. The beard put doubt in his dog-soul. He refused to work. He declined to recognize Julian behind the hirsute mask.

What to do? Julian tried blandishment. No. A juicy bone. Result: The upturning of a patrician nose. A whip. Defiance.

"Nothing doing," sighed Julian in defeat. "We'll have to cut out the part."

And "Thor" now rests in the shade of Universal City's outbranching pepper-trees, like a tramy who has won a meal without paying. Nor does he care.

Little Kid of France. Little kid of France, With your bashful glance, Sombre eyes askance, Standing in the door, Come, be roguish wily, Stretch your hand, if shyly, Be a trifle smug, If there is a war.

Little kid of France, With your funny pants, Dare to take a chance, Come and get in soon, Please, don't be so chary, Wide-eyed and so stary, Though we're strange and scary, We are strong for you.

LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

On Dancing. Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I frequently read your advice to Lovelorn. I note with some thought how you answer the numerous questions that are put to you from time to time in this connection and with what exactness you answer by your sword of justice, cutting to the very quick where morality and Christianity seem to join.

I have taken special notice, and so far as I have been able to observe you sanction dancing. Now, I ask you the question: It may not be observed by the dancer, boy or girl, man or woman at first, but does it not start the germs, the roots of immorality?

I am an inquirer also. I am for name, J. L. BENTZ. Not necessarily. It depends entirely upon the attitude of the dancer. There is clean dancing the same as there is clean church-going or anything else. Some of the hum-ming-bird positions are cause for worry—not the rhythm of dancing.

Popular Meets Popular. Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: We are two boy chums and we are very popular in the town of C.

We love twins, who are very popular with the other boys. What can we do to make them pay more attention to us? It is proper for one of the twins to come to my house to see me and stay two days, as we are not engaged yet?

Please print this in the next issue, as we will leave this town soon. How is my handwriting? HARRY AND LEO.

It's indeed a happy occurrence when popular meets popular, but perchance it is best for you that they do not pay overly much attention to you. That is where they have added wisdom to popularity—the secret of their prestige.

The twin would hardly come to your home without the invitation of your mother, and it is more a question of individual choice than propriety. Maybe, too—Mr. Harry or Leo—she comes not only to see you. She may like the rest of the family, too, and they her.

A Good Girl. Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I have been guilty of reading your column and am going to see what you will say to me. I am 15 years old.

I have never gone steady with any boy and I never go to public dances or have anything to do with anybody to whom I have not been formally introduced.

No, I am not an angel, but I have always prided myself on my respectability.

I am said to be good looking and always try to look my very best on all occasions.

But here's what bothers me: When I meet a boy, after a short acquaintance they ask to take me to places. As sure as I go they ask to kiss me good-night. I never will permit this, and the same boy never asks me out twice, but I have a lady's name to look out for. But I am so lonesome. Isn't there a man in the world who appreciates a good, decent girl for I can never be anything else. Yours in sincerity, LOLETTE LANE.

You are doing absolutely the right thing.

NOTICE

Please confine your letters to not more than 200 words if you wish to see them in print. This becomes necessary because of the great number of letters arriving on every mail.

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I have been reading with much interest your page of advice; I need advice and need it bad.

In the first place, I am very handsome; in fact so much so it is quite painful. What would you think if I should manicure my nose. I would like to improve it, would you suggest paint or rouge?

Secondly, I used to have a beautiful moustache, could tie it together behind my neck; I finally cut it off. Do you think I look better?

Thirdly, how would you advise me to dress my hair. I have a tuft back of each ear, the place it once adorned is now a barren waste.

It would warm the cockles of my heart were I to see this in The Bee with your answer.

How is my writing? Yours truly, O. B. JOYFUL. We get you, O. B. J. It's all right with us.

Miss Sixteen—Are you too young to have a "fellow" and to go to the city to work? It seems to me that you are not nearly so lonesome right now as you would be in the city. That doesn't make one happy; and by your letter I think that you had better just stay where you are and forget the city now and have friends instead of "one and only one fellow"—you're only a little girl.

Land S.—Dark-eyed boy of 18—so very good looking as you—should it seem divide your charms among more than one girl. It seems far better in the end to "change of once in a while," as you say—especially if you save four nights every week for the lady of 18.

P. E.—Give your hair a good shampoo and go to a druggist for a prescription for a good hair tonic and cleanser.

TELLS HOW HE GOT RID OF HIS CORNS. Well-Known Man Relates Remarkable Experience.

By George! I never saw anything like the effects of that new treatment, Ice-Mint, for removing corns and bringing quick relief to tired, swollen, aching, burning feet. It acted like a "miraculous" cure, said a well-known man yesterday, in speaking of this discovery which has caused such a big stir among Foot Specialists. "I had carried a pet corn for years that simply took all the joy out of life. I tried plasters, salves, other compounds and all the other 'doses' that is supposed to do the trick, but the persistent itching simply would not leave me. I began to think there was nothing on earth that would kill my corn, when I finally read about the remarkable results obtained by foot sufferers from the use of Ice-Mint. I decided to try it for myself and before I hardly realized it my corn came out—and all—without causing the least pain or soreness. Believe me, it seems mighty good not to be afraid some one is going to hit my toes—and the relief—well that just seems like Paradise."
