Advice to the Lovelorn

Love Comes Unbidden and, "To Love or Not We Are No More Free Than the Ripple to Rise and Leave the Sea."

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Write to Her.

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I am a girl of 17 and greatly enjoy things not of the ordinary. I would greatly appreciate your efforts toward getting me, or informing me as to where I may get the addresses of a few foreign girls, preferably allied, in foreign countries, who can read and write the American language.

I am now corresponding with a French girl of my own age and find her letters to be very interesting.

I am particularly interested in a Belgian, an English girl and an Italian.

Thanking you in advance for your information, I am, anxiously yours, EDNA M'PHEETERS, Chappell, Neb., Box 246.

I hope some of our good friends will write to you.

Tragic.

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: I am a boy, 21 years old, just discharged from the navy, and I feel that I need her, from taking poison, which I know she will do when I tell her how my feelings toward her have changed? If this does happen, the blame will naturally fall on me. How can I live down the disgrace? Now, please, Miss Fairfax, this is getting worse every day. I need the answer right away. A GOB.

That is the dangerous element, always to be reckoned with, in long engagements. Can you not talk quite plainly to her—even say that you have concluded that you do not not be the right man for her or she the right woman for you. Tell her that there are better men in the world whom she will be far happier with and that your marriage would mean ruin for you both.

Go Easy, Girlie.

Dear Miss Fairfax, Omaha Bee: You certainly have my most heartfelt sympathy for all the questions you have to answer. They aren't just difficult, they're abstruse, impossible. But you answer them. You can accomplish the impossible. Here's to a genius; here's to you!

My question may be just as silly to you as some others are to me, but I am sincere in wanting the opinion of some of the readers. I'm not overly popular with the boys although I am fortunate enough to have several friends who take me to shows, concerts and parties occasionally—and best of all a soldier man in France who is a really "sweetheart." So you see "lovelorn" isn't exactly the word in my case.

Well, here is my quandary. Years ago I had a boy friend who married another girl. We weren't sweethearts, but just the kind of friends that "stuck" through thick and thin. Our families had been friends for two generations, and it was understood that "the name of friendship is sacred; what you demand in that name I have the power to deny you." Now he has asked me to help him. His wife (a lovely girl whom I loved) has died, leaving a tiny little baby, and he has written for me to come and take care of it. I have been doing work that pays $45 to $50 a month, and the wages he could pay wouldn't be nearly that much. But since I don't have to get any certain salary I feel as if I ought to help him, for he has always seemed like a younger brother to me. Do you think there would be criticism of me going into his home in such a case? I am confident that the baby's mother would feel satisfied with her little one in my care, and know if my mother were living she would want me to "do my bit."

Well, he has to have both men and women express themselves in this matter. Don't think I am some green—Your letter is incomplete. Evidently you enclosed only part of it. I can see where it would be splendid of you to take care of your friend's child, but I also see a thousand tongues wagging in the wrong direction. Another thing, if you married this man later, it would be all right, but if you continue to be merely friends you might regret it. Please understand that I know how you both feel about it, but unless you are fearless and care nothing about public opinion (it's dreadfully cruel), be very slow to accept his offer.

Timid Teddy.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I have read your column for about a year and would like for you to answer. Is it right for a girl to talk with other boys while I am there. She says she loves me, but she gets angry with me when I say anything. What can I do so I can see if she really loves me? TEDDY?
Jump in the river. If she loves you this will be the test.

Pals—Delighted that you are popular and capable of settling your own love affairs. I imagine you are trying to ask about graduation dresses, but your letter is so poorly constructed that this is only a guess.

Mr. and Mrs. John Beaton are now in New Orleans, and Mrs. M. L. Rastree and Miss Julia Rastree are occupying the Beaton home.

The "One-Minute" Electric Power Washing Machine

There'll Be No Laundress Disappointments. You Can Choose Your Own Wash Day. If It Rains--There'll Be Sunshine Tomorrow. Dreaded Tasks Will Be Things of the Past. Your Wash Can Be Drying Before Nine. Use Electric Current From Any Socket. Costs But a Few Cents to Operate.

And most important of all, it saves your STRENGTH and HEALTH and many HOURS each week for other duties

An Expert From the Newton (Iowa) Factory Will Demonstrate One-Minute Washers HERE

THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

Two styles are here illustrated. There are no complicated parts to break or get out of order. Two simple levers control the machine. One starts, stops and reverses wringer, and the other starts and stops washer. A batch of clothes is put in, the cover let down, and one push of a simple lever starts the washer. After a short time, stop the washer by a pull of the same lever and the clothes are perfectly washed. A lever at your right hand starts the wringer and the clothes are wrung into the rinse water. The washer is then filled with another batch of clothes, a little more soap is added, and the washer is started by a push of the lever.

The Automatic Power Wringer

—in itself a most wonderful labor-saver—is swung around between your two rinse tubs and the first lot of washed clothes is wrung from the rinse water into the bluing water—from the bluing water into the clothes basket, ready to be hung on the line to dry. Ten or fifteen minutes' time and the first tubful is finished. All this while the washer is working and by the time you are back from hanging out the first batch of clothes the second tubful is all washed and ready to be put through the wringer into the rinse water and bluing water and into the clothes basket. Have these facts demonstrated—come Thursday, Friday or Saturday. The factory demonstrator will gladly answer your inquiries.

Lines or Wrinkles Indicate Carelessness

THERE is no need of looking old. Neither years nor weather affect the skin when properly cared for. A little care each day will keep away the wrinkles.

Try this simple formula—

"A little CREME ELCAYA rubbed gently into the skin three times a day will keep the skin in fine condition. The cream is quite dry, and after that the film of face powder over it."

CREME ELCAYA

is a delightful, non-greasy, disappearing toilet cream that makes the skin like velvet.

Your dealer has ELCAYA and has sold it for years. Ask him.
