

"Y" SECRETARY SUPPLIES MEN WITH TOBACCO

Major Adee Tells of Work on Battle Front; Predicts Unheard of Boom in Athletic Sports.

Operating on a shoe string is not all done in Wall Street, according to one Wall street man, formerly a major of the 311th infantry, who declared that his battalion, made up of New Jersey and eastern New York troops, had gone through all the worst fighting last summer and fall without a sou. The men were paid in July and before the first of August there wasn't money enough in the banks to cash a $100 bill in a Peruvian market. Yet they enjoyed little comforts and luxuries.

In a letter to William Sloane, chairman of the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A., Maj. George T. Adee, of the 311th infantry, a member of the brokerage firm of Batcheller & Adee, and the president of the United States National Lawn Tennis association, told how a "Y" secretary had kept his men supplied with tobacco and cigars, with occasional chocolate and candy, during the entire time at the front.

Furnished Articles Free.
"At the end of August we moved to the American sector near Chaumont, and the early part of September we went to the front and stayed there until ordered home, the 30th of October," wrote Major Adee. "When we went to the front a Y. M. C. A. secretary, a Mr. Coe, attached himself to my battalion and I take pleasure in saying that he exposed himself fearlessly at all times to German shell fire. He kept the battalion supplied with cigars and tobacco, and once or twice a week he would have chocolate, candies or cake for every man in the battalion. If the men had any money they paid for these things, but if they had no money he gave these articles to them free. As the men were paid in July, and not after that, they never had any money so that at least 90 per cent of these supplies were given to them."

Mr. Adee declared that each man had at least one package of cigars each day, and that the only thing that the Y. M. C. A. secretary received for the thousands of dollars worth of supplies that he gave away was several hundred francs that the officers gave to the cause.

Athletics and Army Life.
In telling of the effects that athletics had on the building up of the American army Mr. Adee mentioned the effects that the army training would have on athletics. Specialized and discriminating training of a few athletics for college sports, at the expense of the development of the remainder, has been killed by the war, he declares. The Y. M. C. A. emphasizes mass athletics.

"Yale and a number of other schools in taking up athletics again are going to institute a system of mass training," he stated. "They will develop all the students instead of the favored few, and in this way they will broaden the field of athletics and will institute a much higher standard of sport. There will be many more intercollegiate meets and games, and athletics will be stimulated generally."

"Athletics are going to boom as never before, both because the leaders are working harder to stimulate interest and because the men who have gone into the army will not want to give up their new condition. Daylight saving, too, is going to help this movement greatly, because the men will have an hour more a day out of doors than ever

Warmest of Greetings When Old Friends Meet

The Lambs club of New York has turned itself into a temporary home for wounded soldiers back from the front. These men are given all the privileges of actual membership, and strange sights are often witnessed in that care free institution. Bayard Veiller, the dramatist, relates this incident:

"I was sitting in the lobby one day talking with a captain of marines invalided home after a touch of pneumonia. He had been telling me about a big southern in a company—a private—and I judged by what the captain said about him that this Buck person was more or less the fair haired child of the outfit."

"Just then the door opened and in came a long, lanky individual dragging one leg behind him."

"By the living Jingo!" yelled the captain. "There's ole Buck now!"

"It was a pretty even thing which was first into the clinch—the officer or the private. Well, they hugged each other, they hammered each other on the back, they yelled until people came down from the floor above to see what was happening. Finally they calmed down a bit and went away into a corner, where they sat, each with his arm around the other's neck, engaged in low toned conversation."

"At last the officer remembered me and came back."
"A great fellow, Buck!" he exclaimed with enthusiasm.
"So I should imagine by the way you greeted him. You a captain and he a private. Did I dream it or have I heard that there is such a thing as discipline in the United States marine corps?"
"You listen to me!"—and the captain threw the parade ground rasp into his vice—"I was out in No-body Land for three days with that fellow—three days. And we didn't have anything to eat or drink in all that time. And every minute Jerry was feeling for us with shells as big as washbasins. You can take it from me, it was some experience! After you've shared a party of that sort with a private you can't be formal with him. A general couldn't!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Profiteer Exposed.
"These profiteers," said Representative Eech of Wisconsin, "accuse themselves with their excuses. They remind me of little Willie."
"Little Willie came home the other day with a nice new golf ball."
"Look at the lot he had found this afternoon, father," he said.
"Are you sure, my boy," the father asked, "that it was a lost ball?"
"Oh, yes sir," said little Willie. "I saw the owner and his caddy looking for it!"—Detroit Free Press
